U. S. to Back World Arms Limitation, Byrnes Says

Secretary Reveals Policy as Step in Peace Preservation At House Hearing

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Secretary of State Byrnes revealed yesterday that the United States plans to back a movement to limit world armaments as a step to preserve the peace.

Testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee he declared that one of the planks of American foreign policy is to work for an international agreement regulating armaments.

"We desire to see the world freed from both the fears and the economic burdens which the maintenance fo unnecessarily large armed forces imposes upon peoples," Byrnes said.

Since the end of the war, "there has not yet been time" to establish a "system of arms regulation," the Secretary stated. He added quickly that he was "confident" this objective could be accomplished.

Byrnes did not make plain whether he was talking of reduction of the present large military, naval and air forces of world powers, or simply limiting further expansion.

In Light of Needs

He told the committee that "it is a purpose of our foreign policy to work for a limitation of armaments in the light of requirements for the maintenance of internal order and of international peace and security."

Later, a prepared text of his statement to the committee was given to the press in which the term, "regulation of armaments" was used instead of "limitation of armaments."

Byrnes was testifying in support of an Administration bill establishing a broad program of military cooperation with other American nations. Under the measure, the United States would transfer arms to Latin-American countries and possibly Canada, train their military and naval personnel and repair ships and equipment turned over to them.

Merely a Replacement Plan

The Secretary emphasized, as General Eisenhower and Admiral Nimitz did Tuesday, that it is not intended to increase Latin-American armaments but simply to replace their old European-built equipment with newer American goods. The prime purpose is to standardize Western Hemisphere armed forces so they can operate together effectively to repel aggression.

Byrnes said he wanted to "express very strongly" his opinon that it would be against the interests of the United States to extensively increase the arms of other nations. Such stimulation of an arms race "with all its disastrous consequences" would be in conflict with "our peaceful aims," he said.

After the hearing, Chairman Bloom of the House group said that no more witnesses would be called and that the committee will meet next week to vote on the bill. Sentiment among members appears to be overwhelmingly in favor of the measure.

Questioned by committeemen, Byrnes said that a number of Latin-American nations have indicated their "whole hearted" support of the bill. He said that the bill was drafted to apply to Canada as well and "it is up to them to decide" if they want to participate in the hemisphere defense plan it contemplates.

Bowles Increases Ceiling Prices On Milk, Butter

Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles last night authorized price increases of one cent per quart on milk, approximately 11 cents a pound on butter, and approximately six cents per pound on cheddar cheese.

The boosts are effective June 1 "or as soon thereafter as practicable." They will make possible an increase to dairy farmers of 40 cents per hundredweight.

Bowles said the increases were due to the face of nicreased necessary to maintain dairy profood costs and "apparent congressional determination to slash food subsidies."

He said "further sharp increases" will be necessary after July 1 if Congress approves subsidy cuts.

A Day of Homage

President Will Lead Nation In Ceremonies for War Dead

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

President Truman will lead a grateful Nation in paying tribute to its war dead today.

He will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in a simple ceremony at 9 a. m. in Arlington National Cemetery.

Later, numerous veteran and patriotic organizations of Washington will lay wreaths at the Unknown Soldier's Tomb. The Memorial Day address will be delivered by Gen. Omar Bradley, Veterans' administrator, in the National Amphitheater at 11:45 a. m.

Fresh-cut flowers will bt placed on 65,000 graves in Arlington Cemetery during the day by more than 400 Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts.

Flowers, presented yesterday to Brig. Gen. Burton M. Hovey, jr., commandant of Bolling Field, by four small children, whose fathers died in World War II, will be cast over the graves in Arlington Cemetery by a trio of B-25s at sundown.

Floral anchors will be cast into the sea and into the waters of the Potomac River in honor of the Navy dead by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, leaving the Naval Gun Factory by tug at 9:45 a. m. and by the Fleet Reserve Association at the Water Gate at 11 a. m.

The United States Marine Corps will honor its dead with services at 4 p. m. at the Iwo Jima Monument, where scores of wreaths will be placed in tribute.

For these and numerous other ceremonies, the weather forecaster has promised fair skies. Yesterday's moderately cool temperatures, reaching a high of 71 degrees at 4 p. m. will climb near 80 degrees this afternoon, he said, adding it will be sunny and warmer—a perfect Memorial Day.

Outgoing travel from Washington was at a low ebb yesterday, according to railways and bus companies.

"We had just the normal daily crowd here. I wouldn't even know from the low number that it was Memorial Day eve," the stationmaster at Union Station declared.

All District and Federal Government employes will have the day off. District retail stores, except for a few drugstores, will be closed. School children will have a four-day weekend with schools closed today and tomorrow.

Numerous picnics and outings also are scheduled.

The Camp Fire Girls of Friendship House will spend their final

U. S. Protests 'Obstruction' By Yugoslavs

Military Government At Trieste Hampered, Representation Says

By the United Press

The United States has protested vigorously to Yugoslavia against attempts by Yugoslavs around Trieste to obstruct the Allied military government.

It was the second time this week that this Government, in cooperation with Britain, has extended its "firm" policy toward Russia to include a member of the Moscow-dominated Balkan bloc of nations.

The United States and Britain earlier had accused Romania of failing to carry out its agreement to hold elections before the end of May.

The American note to Yugoslavia was delivered in Belgrade last Monday by American Charge d'Affaires Harold Shantz and was described here as a "formal protest" about interference by Yugoslav-dominated organizations in that part of Venezia Giulia under Allied military government.

Venezia Giulia is the peninsula on which the disputed city of Trieste is situated. Yugoslavia, supported by the Soviet Union, wants the city. The United States and Britain want Italy to keep it. The city itself is overwhelmingly Italian in population, but the hinterland is predominantly Yugoslav. On the other hand, the city is economically keyed to Yugoslavia and central European countries rather than to Italy.

Woman Harrassed By Uninvited Callers

Victoria, B. C., May 29 (AP).—For three months now, unwanted taxicabs by the score have been arriving at Mrs. J. E. Gort's front door, hundreds of prospects have called to look at two apartments she didn't advertise for rent and department stores and florists have sent her things she didn't order.

All of which, she complained to police, has brought her to a bad state of nerves and has made her mother violently ill. Police haven't a clew, except that the voice which calls the taxicabs is the high-pitched voice of a woman.

Russians Still In Manchuria, Chinese Say

Soviets Had Notified Government of Complete Evacuation

Nanking, May 29 (U.P.).—A high Chinese official said today that Russian forces have not yet completed their withdrawal from Manchuria although they officially notified the Chinese government on May 23 that evacuation was complete. Negotiations for complete withdrawal are under way, he said.

Peace Prospects Brighten

Nanking, May 29 (AP).—Minister of Information Peng Hsueh-pei reaffirmed today the central government's intention of taking over all Manchuria.

At the same time, he expressed hope the Chinese Communists would withdraw their troops peacefully from Harbin and Tsitsihar.

Peng said he thought prospects of a peaceful settlement were bright. The government's demands, he explained, were that the Communists respect the cease-fire agreement reached last January specifically permitting Nationalist military movements in Manchuria for the purpose of restoring sovereignty.

Peng said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's presence in Mukden did not necessarily mean that a peace agreement could not be reached "at this stage of highly developed telecommunications."

Chiang Reported in Charge

He declined to make a flat denial of reports that Chiang was personally directing military operations from Mukden. Earlier Communist leader, Chou En-lai, asserted that the generalissimo, himself, was in charge of the government's Manchurian campaign and that the situation there had taken "a critical turn."

The disconcerting news of widened military activity included reports from Mukden that seven regiments of Communists had been routed at Yungki (Kirin) and were retreating toward the Korean border, and that vanguards of National troops were within 30 miles of Communist-held Harbin.

American MP Hits 2 Russians, 1 Carrying Diplomatic Mail

Rome, May 29 (U.P.).—An American military policeman struck two Russians, both diplomatic officials, at the Ciampino Airport this afternoon, American authorities announced tonight.

One Russian, a courier was accompanying official Russian Embassy mail which had been put aboard an American plane bound for Paris. The courier boarded the plane too soon and an Army Transport Corps officer ordered him off. The Russian refused. The officer called the military policeman. The policeman struck the Russian after he resisted, said Lieut. Col. R. M. Crow, commander at Ciampino.

Crow said that when escorting the courier down a ramp from the plane the military policeman "interpreted the action of a civilian bystander as defiance of his orders and struck him." The civilian was later identified as a Russian Embassy official.

Names of the military policeman and the Russians were not immediately released.

Colonel Crow said it had not been determined whether the American used his fist or the flat of his hand. He added that the Russians suffered no serious injury and there was no blood.

House Puts Case Measure Up to Truman

Drastic Strike Bill Sent Through by Vote Of 230 to 106; Veto Is Believed Likely

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A tumultuous Senate yesterday knocked the labor draft club from the President's "stop-strikes against Government" bill even as Congress completed action on more sweeping legislation.

Senate rejection of the labor draft, coming on the heels of the coal strike settlement was made by a one-sided, 70 to 13, roll call vote.

Just three hours earlier the House approved permanent labor controls in the Senate version of the Case bill. The House vote was 230 to 106.

The tough Case bill, opposed by organized labor more vehemently than it fought the President's emergency powers, now goes to the White House.

Veto Expected

Leaders clearly expect the President, who inveighed as late as Saturday against "restrictive" labor measures, to veto the Case bill.

But yesterday's congressional double-header put the President in a spot. If the Senate recommits Mr. Truman's emergency measure—a strong possibility—the Case bill will be urged by its proponents as the only weapon he is likely to get to deal with future strikes.

The Senate struck from his bill authority to draft men who continue on strike against Government-seized industries after half an hour of Senate turmoil.

Barkley Announces Settlement

By unanimous consent agreement, a vote had been slated at 5 p. m. As the hour approached, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) announced settlement of the coal strike.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) followed Barkley with an appeal for postponement of the vote, until the Senate could give it "calmer" consideration. After unsuccessful feelers on recommittal of the bill, he moved flatly that the Senate recess until 11 a. m. tomorrow.

The parliamentary storm broke when Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), in the chair, ruled the recess motion in order. Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) shouted "tyranny." There were a series of appeals from the ruling and a quorum call. While Senators wrangled over whether the agreement to vote at 5 p. m. was "sancrosanct," the clock ticked past five. Tydings finally ended the row. He brought the draft provision to a vote by withdrawing his motion to recess.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, proud of his Senate labor record, nonetheless stuck by the President to the last.

In a final futile plea for retention of the labor draft section, he

Owners to Regain Mines on Accepting Terms Effected By Government

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

John L. Lewis yesterday signed a new coal contract with the Government, gaining wage raises and a welfare fund for his 400,000 union members, and thereby ending the strike.

Emerging from the White House, where he signed the contract at 4:07 p. m., in the presence of Mr. Truman, Lewis said the miners would be ordered back to work "immediately."

However, he explained, owing to today's national holiday and the time needed to prepare the mines for resumption of production, it would probably be Monday before operations were normal.

After Week's Negotiations

The new contract developed from a week's negotiations between Lewis and Interior Secretary Krug and Vice Admiral Ben Moreell, acting for the Government in its role as mine opereator.

There was no immediate indication when the mines, seized by the Government on May 22, would be returned to their owners. They will only be returned, it was clear, when the private operators accept the terms of the Government contract and execute identical agreements with the mine union.

The operators made no official comment on the contract which they will have to accept to regain possession of their property. It was learned, however, that during the negotiation of the agreement, the operators were constantly consulted.

Believed Not Too Unhappy

Moreele told reporters that in discussions with the operators yesterday, "from the questions they asked me, I gathered they weren't too unhappy."

A spokesman for the coal operators estimated that the increases won by Lewis would boost the price of bituminous coal from 35 to 50 cents a ton. Unofficial OPA estimates held that the increase would run from about 20 to 35 cents. The OPA emphasized that the contract was entirely compatable with the national wage-price stabilization formula.

The contract applies only to the period of Government operation. It serves to end a nation-wide strike of complete effectiveness of 42 days, from April 1 to May 13.

There ensued a two-week truce, but during most of it about half of the miners drifted away from their jobs. The truce expired May 25, beginning Monday, May 27, and continuing through today, only a handful of mines was in operation.

Major Provisions

1. Wages and Hours. The basic work week is reduced to five days, with work on the sixth optional but payable at time and one-half rates. The day is nine hours, portal to portal, with overtime paid for the last two hours, as previously.

All wages are increased by 18½ cents an hour, the Government pattern. The effect is to give all workers, regardless of how employed, a daily increase of $1.85.

On a weekly basis, a miner who earned the basic rate of $10 a day under the old contract will receive $59.25 for five days' work and $75.25 for six, as against a previous wage of $50 and $63.50 for five and six days, respectively.

2. Welfare Fund. The mines will

Western High Takes 2 Awards At Cadet Drill

Company K Captures First Place; Third Goes to Company G

Western High School marched off with two places in the annual competitive drill yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

Company K, of Western, commanded by Capt. David T. Styles, won first place, Company B, of Anacostia, under Capt. Hunt V. Martin, jr., placed second, and Company G, of Western, Capt. Richard L. Hehan, third.

Band competitions were won by Roosevelt, Capt. Howard Ratain, first, McKinley, Capt. Donald B. Wilson, second, and Woodrow Wilson, Capt. Robert Silsbee, third.

Western's Company K drilled on Tuesday in the puddles of the parade ground at 21st and East Capitol sts. Previous to going on the field Capt. Styles said, "we're going to win. I've got a really sharp hunch."

Ten of the 23 cadet companies competed Tuesday, while the other 13 drilled today in competition. Then all of the more than 1000 cadets paraded at the stadium when winners were announced and awards made.

Last year's drill was won by Company H of Western.

Both of the lieutenants in Company K of won medals from the Inter-High Council. They were First Lieut. Rolfe Schvell, and Second Lieut. Charles D. Ford.

Bradley Hits Plan to Boost Pensions 20%

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Gen. Omar Bradley flashed a red light yesterday on a growing drive for increased veterans' pensions and disability benefits.

Appearing before the House Veterans Committee, the administrator of veterans' affairs opposed:

1. A 20 per cent increase in pensions and retirement pay for veterans of World Wars I and II.

2. A system of family allotments for dependents of disabled veterans.

3. Free distribution of automobiles, or $1500, in lieu, to veterans who lost limbs in the war.

Approves Liberalized Pensions

General Bradley, however, did place his stamp of approval on a move to liberalize pensions of veterans undergoing hospitalization.

General Bradley opposed the 20 per cent increase, which would raise the Nation's pension outlay by nearly 400 million dollars the first year, on the following grounds:

1. All classes of disability and death compensation provided for World Wars I and II veterans and their dependents have been increased "substantially" since July, 1943, including a 15 per cent general increase.

2. The "current increase in wages and the wide spread of employment opportunities" make it easier for partially disabled persons to obtain jobs "to supplement the compensation or pension income."

3. Compensation rates are designed as a "supplement" to the earning capacity of a veteran, except for one who is totally disabled, and should not be considered as a substitute for the amount which the veteran might have earned.

4. If compensation is increased when there is an increase in the cost of living, it would "logically follow" that compensation should be reduced when the cost of living decreases. Therefore, veterans have "greater security" with a "stabilized compensation."

Allotments Opposed

The second proposal objected to by General Bradley would give additional allowances for dependents to veterans drawing pensions for

Ship Worker Federation Drive Gains

Maritime Strike Must Not Take Place, Schwellenbach Warns

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

The drive to link 200 thousand ship workers into one mighty CIO federation gained power yesterday out of efforts to head off the nation-wide maritime strike set for June 15.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach warned the seven unions and 39 operators who are deadlocked tha tthe strike must not take place.

"I told tehm," he said after the closed meeting, "that we just simply cannot have a maritime strike. The international situation and the need for shipment of food is such that they will have to continue to negotiate until an agreement is reached."

Would Involve 3100 Ships

The strike would involve 3100 ships—about 2400 of which belong to the Government—and Schwellenbach has said before that relief abroad and reconversion in this country would suffer heavily from their being tied up.

All afternoon the union and company spokesmen wrangled over who spoke for whom. When the meeting broke up—to resume at 8 p. m.—the CIO federation leaders had won their point, and were speaking for all of the seven unions.

Maritime union leaders have dreamed for years of welding seagoing and shoreside workers into a powerful federation with the greatest possible control of shipping. The chance came at last this year, when five big unions backed up their demands for a 30 per cent wage boost, and other benefits, with a strike call for June 15.

Pushing the federation project were three men who may yet clash for the rich prize of its leadership:

1. Harry Bridges, fluent, fiery hawk-nosed president of ILWU—the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union.

2. Joe Curran, towering, square-faced, frowning president of NMU — the National Maritime Union—which Curran two months

'Authorities Frustrated'

Draft Situation 'Deplorable,' Patterson Tells Governors

Oklahoma City, May 29 (AP).—Secretary of War Patterson said today the Army's manpower situation is "deplorable" because Congress exempted teen-agers from the draft.

"All that has been accomplished by four years of fighting can be jeopardized in the next 30 days," the Cabinet officer declared in a speech prepared for the Governor's Conference.

Pledging that the Army will not advocate continuing Selective Service "when it has become reasonably clear that our manpower needs will be met by volunteers," Patterson added:

"Right now the conditions are deplorable. With an extension only to July 1, and with 18 and 19 yead old men exempted, the Selective Service authorities are frustrated and helpless.

"The exemption categories, for one reason or another, cover just about every man in the country. A survey made last week showed that only 36,000 men are left in the draft pool, and this in a nation of 140 millions."

Patterson, urging the Governors to support a draft bill which would be a "real extension and not a paper one," cautioned against "taking changes" or indulging in "wishful thinking" of an all-volunteer army.

In Washington the current draft act expires July 1, with House and Senate far apart on what form it should take after that.

Patterson said the War Department proposed to make the post-war National Guard organizations strong "pillars in the structure of national defense."

He added that in the war National Guardsmen made a brilliant record on every fighting front and "proved once more the value of the trained citizen-soldier."

Meanwhile the Nation's Governors called upon Congress and each State Legislature today to "enact legislation which will require capital and labor to maintain the uninterrupted service of utilities essential to the life and health of the people."

The call came in a resolution adopted by the annual conference.

Text of the resolution:

"Resolved that the Congress and each State Legislature be urged to enact legislation which will require capital and labor to maintain the uninterrupted service of utilities essential to the life and health of the people."

The Governors adopted another resolution urging that the selective Service Act, now scheduled to expire July 1, be extended.

This resolution said:

"An adequate Army and Navy are prerequisite to the defense of

U. S. Sending Ship to Spain To Call Franco Bluff on Nazis

By the Associated Press

The United States is sending a ship to move almost 1000 Nazis from Spain to Germany, but officials admitted last night that the Franco government may more or less ignore this attempt to call its bluff on expulsion of the Germans.

The State Department also said today that the United States and Britain are trying to get conrol of 55 million dollars of privately held German assets in Spain.

Prospects for this are brighter authorities said. They pointed out than for the expulsion of Nazis, that similar negotiations already have yielded Allied control over 45 millions dollars worth of embassy and consular property and mining as well as transport and other facilities owned by a German state corporation.

The ship, the Marine Perch, is due at Bilbabo June. It can carry 947 passengers and the Spanish are getting some Germans ready to travel on it—but only about 100 to 200, according to reports reaching here.

The dispatch of this hip appears in some respects to be a kind of ultimatum to Franco. The State Deuartment announcement disclosed that the United States, Britain and France have "made avail-

Army Paper Staff Protests Interference

Manila, May 29 (AP).—Charging interference from higher-ups, the entire staff of the Daily Pacifican, Army newspaper, requested a transfer to other duties today.

Their charge that requirements from superiors to "twist, omit, bury and deceptively present news" prevented the Pacifican from being a "free and honest newspaper," brought from Brig. Gen. E. J. McGaw, assistant chief of staff of the Western Pacific Command, the comment:

"Obviously, such control is necessary as the Pacifican is considered and often is quoted as an official Army publication.

The Pacifican's managing editor, Cpl. Don Lawder, formerly an editor of the Hudson County CIO News published at Jersey City, N. J., said officers at Western Pacific headquarters were "clamping down" on editorial criticism or news tending to show Army inefficiency, and that the paper was in danger of be oming "a house organ."

Railway Express Strike Settled, White House Says

The White House announced last night the signing of an agreement ending the long labor dispute between the Railway Express Agency, Inc., and 75,000 employes.

The agreement, disclosed by Press Secretary Charles C. Ross, follows the pattern set by settlement of the railway dispute. It allows an incerase og 16 cents an hour retroactive to January 1 and two and one half cents an hour retroactive to May 22, or a total of 18½ cents.

Ross said the action, which took place at 6 p. m. (EST), settled the lats of the big Nation-wide industrial disputes with one exception. That's the threatened strike June 15 in the maritime industry.

Morrison Says Talk on Food Misinterpreted

London, May 29 (U.P.).—Laborite Leader Herbert Morrison told Commons today that there was never any misunderstanding with the United States over food commitments and accused his principal questioner, Winston Churchill, of "making politics out of this."

Morrison was on the Parliamentary carpet because of his statement of last Thursday when he said the United States would help feed India and the British zone of Germany and "work to save the standard of rationing."

His statement drew the comment from an American State Department spokesman that the United States had not committed itself to keep rations in the British zone up to those in the American zone. British fears that Morrison had antagonized the United States brought about today's questioning.

"The misunderstandings were caused by cable press messages of my statement before the official text was received by the State Department in Washington," Morrison said.

"One message in particular was interpreted in some quarters as implying that the United States had assumed specific commitments to export American wheat to particular areas, thus by-passing the established procedure by which these questionsare settled by the Combined Food Board."

Nurseries to Stay Open in Arlington

The three Arlington Cooperative Nursery schools will operate throughout the summer on present schedules, Mrs. Miriam W. Bowling, director, announced last night.

Mrs. Bowling said there now were a few vacancies in all the nurseries, which offer full-day and half-day care for children between the ages of 2 and 6.

They are located in each of the Federal Public Housing Administration projects in Arlington County: Pickett Momes, 2124 S. 12th st.; Shirley Homes, 1350 S. 28th st., and Stuart Homes, 1425 S. Kent st.

this Nation and necessary to the maintenance of peace; now therefore be it resolved that the Governors' conference strongly urges that the Congress extend at once the Selective Service and adopt a compulsory military training and service program.

Governors also adopted a resolution urging that "Congress . . . provide necessary legislation and appropriations so that . . . a National Guard can be activated without any unnecessary delay."

Veterans' services, the conference decided, should rest mainly with the States.

A resolution touching on States rights also was passed. It said:

"Resolved that the Congress be urged to examine the fields of Federal, State and local government to the end that States' and local responsibilities be left to and assumed by the States and local units of governments."

disabilities incurred in the line of duty.

For totally disabled veterans, this family allotment would be $25 for a wife, $15 for the first child, $12 for the second child, $10 for each additional child, $15 for each dependent parent. Partially disabled veterans would receive a proportionate part of the dependency allowance.

The administrator said that the dependency allowances would affect 820,000 veterans, at an increased pension cost of 125 million dollars the first year.

The general labeled "a bonus for a limited group of veterans" a number of bills which would give free automobiles to veterans who have lost limbs in the armed forces.

Presenting his opinion in the presence of a dozen amputees from Walter Reed Hospital, General Bradley said he was unable to come out in favor of the legislation "in spite of our feeling of sympathy for these veterans who have suffered and are suffering so greatly . . ."

General Bradley said that mere possession of the car would not solve the transportation difficulties of the amputees, since they would still have to cope with acute parking problems and walk to their jobs from their parking places.

Secondly, he said, if it is sound policy to furnish a car initially to the disabled veteran, then Congress should consider the appropriateness of assuming responsibility for keeping the veteran supplied with a car. There is also the question of maintenance and operation of the car, he added.

A provision permitting the amputees to accept $1500 instead of a free automobile leads to the "inescapable" conclusion, General Bradley argued that the legislation is primarily a bonus.

The free-auto legislation, Bradley, said, would be difficult to administer, and would lead pressure by other disabled groups, such as paralyzed veterans.

Rankin Backs Him

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), a leading proponent of free autos for disabled, sharply questioned the administrator. Chairman John Rankin (D., Miss.), on the other hand, backed up General Bradley, and left no doubt that he was against the Government legislating automobiles instead of compensation.

General Bradley approved legislation to liberalize pensions for hospitalized veterans who have no dependents. Currently, disabled veterans who have no dependents have their pensions cut to $20 a month, if their injury was incurred in the service, to $6 a month, if their injury occurred after they left the service.

The administrator pointed out that paraplegics (spinal-cord paralysis victims) were particularly discriminated against, since otherwise they might get as much as $300 a month if they could leave the hospitals.

able to the Spanish government" the information on the ship's arrival date at Balboa.

This would give Franco "one month's advance notice in which to concentrate an adequate number of Germans for removal."

However, if Franco ignores the Allied gesture and sends only a few Nazis, apparently nothing can be done about it.

Some weeks ago the British sent a ship to Bilboa. After it had taken aboard all the Nazis the Spanish wanted to send, it still was less than half full.

The State Department says there are 2208 Nazis in Spain that the American Government wants to get back to Germany. These include 794 spies, 450 scientists and engineers, 931 officials and 30 border guards.

Senator Glass' Rites Set Today In Lynchburg

A special funeral train will take the body of Senator Carter Glass on his last ride home from Washington to Lynchburg, Va., today.

Congressional colleagues, members of Senator Glass' family and other close friends will accompany the body, for the funeral services at his home this afternoon.

The train will leave Union Station at 8:45 a. m., and will reach Lynchburg about 12:45 p. m.

Hundreds of the Senator's Washington associates, friends and admirers in Virginia and elsewhere are expected to attend final services for the fiery dean of the Senate who died in his sleep at 1:50 a. m. Tuesday in his Mayflower Hotel apartment.

Following arrival at Lynchburg, the casket will be taken immediately to "Montview," Senator Glass' beloved home south of Lynchburg. From the veranda of the stone mansion Senator Glass used to comment that he could see 140 miles of the Old Dominion.

Report That U. S. To Sue Klan for Taxes Unconfirmed

Atlanta, May 29 (AP).—A recurrent report that the Government is ready to "crack down" on the Ku-Klux Klan for back taxes lacked official confirmation today.

Marion Allen, United States collector of revenue here, declined to confirm or deny the report. He said any information would have to come from records of Fulton Superior Court.

The report was published by the Atlanta Constitution, which said it obtained its information on the highest authority. It said the Government would file tax liens against Klan property.

The newspaper said the back taxes amounted to nearly $700,000 for several yeears in the early '20s. The liens are in Georgia, it added, because the hooded order is chartered in Georgia.

Marxists Win 152 of 300 Czech Assembly Seats

Prague, May 29 (U.P.).—Rude Pravo, the official Communist newspaper in Czechoslovakia, reported today that final tabulations in Sunday's election had given the Marxist parties 152 of the 300 seats in the Czech National Assembly.

It listed Marxist seats as: Czech Communists, 93; Slovakian Communists, 21; Social Democrats, 36, and Slovak Labor Party, 2. Non-Marxist seats, it said, would be: National Socialists, 55; People's Party, 47; Slovak Democrats, 43, Slovak Freedom Party, 3.

Folger Takes Lead For N. C. House Seat

Winston-Salem, N. C., May 29 (AP). Representative John H. Folger took a 13-vote lead over Thurmond Chatham in their race for the Fifth District congressional nominations as returns from Saturday's Democratic primary were revised today. Complete unofficial returns had given Chatham, wealthy blanket manufacturers, a lead of 150 votes.

With returns from five of the district's seven counties officially tabulated, the vote stood; Folger, 21,223; Chatham, 21,210; Joe J. Harris, 805.

Police Allow Meeting Of America Firsters

St. Louis, May 29 (AP).—A small group of followers of Gerald L. K. Smith, head of the Ameri a First Party, held a meeting at Kiel Auditorium today after President Mark Eagleton of the Board of Police Commissioners decided that "the ingredients of trouble" were not present.

Chief of Police James J. Mitchell had prevented a meeting at the auditorium last night in order, he said, to prevent recurrence of the disorder which characterized an America First Party rally here several weeks ago.

COAL

pay into the fund 5 cents for every ton of coal mined. The fund will be administered by one man chosen by Lewis, one by the Government, and a third chosen by the other two individuals.

It will be used to pay miners and their families for wage loss, not otherwise adequately compensated for, resulting from sickness, disability, death, retirement, etc.

Estimating the labor cost of a ton of coal at about $2, the 5-cent levy is the equivalent of a 2½ per cent payroll tax. Lewis had asked for 7 per cent. He had also demanded sole administration of the fund. The operators had rejected the entire principle of the fund as "a new social theory and philosophy," and Congress had taken steps to outlaw its payment in the royalty terms specified in the contract.

From Wage Deductions

3. Medical and Hospital Fund. In addition to the welfare fund, another fund contributed to solely by the miners, from wage deductions, will be administered by the union alone. The wage deductions had been made in the past, but the resulting fund was run by the companies to provide a company doctor system.

4. Vacation Pay. The previous pay of $75 in lieu of vacations is raised to $100.

5. Unionization of Foremen. Questions concerning the bargaining rights of foremen and supervisory employes will be guided by the decisions of the National Labor Relations Board. (The Case bill, passed by both Houses of Congress, would deny foremen the privileges of the Wagner Act.)

6. Safety. Within 30 days, the Bureau of Mines will issue a "reasonable" code of standards and rules of safety conditions and practices. These must be observed on penalty of shutting down the mine or replacing the manager. Mine inspectors will make periodic investigations and reports of violations.

To Select Safety Committee

Further, the union is allowed to select a local mine safety committee which may inspect the workings. In special instances where it believes immediate danger is present it will have the right to requre removal of the miners. This last privilege, however, is subject to modification or cancellation by the Government.

7. Workmens' Compensation. Each mine must participate in workmens' compensation and occupational disease laws existing in the State in which the mine is located. All States have such laws, but in many, participation has been optioned, with the result that many miners were not onvered.

Following yesterday's signing ceremonies at the White House, Krug declared that he felt the contract's terms were fair both the miners and the operators. He added:

"It's too bad we didn't have it two months ago."

In Cheerful Mood

Lewis was in a cheerful mood and said that the contract settled all the questions and issues outstanding in the dispute.

A sidelight on the week's developments, it was learned yesterday, was the fact that in the negotiations Admiral Morsell constantly referred to a series of articles in The Washington Post by Agnes E. Meyer, dealing with the plight of Southern coal miners.

Morsell appeared to be notably impressed by the findings relating to the need for health and welfare provisions in the mining areas.

LABOR

reminded Senators of the Government's predicament last week end, pointed out that only when the Government's supremacy is threatened would the power be used "if it is ever used."

"If my 34 years' record in the Senate is cancelled out by my vote on this problem, so be it," he told the Senate. "I am ready and willing to take the consequences."

Of the Senate's once sizable bloc of Administration Democrats, only one, Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.), and Senator Carl Hatch (D., N. M.) stuck with him. The other nine Senators who voted "no" were all Southern Democrats.

Thirty-two Democrats joined 37 Republicans and one Progressive (LaFollette) to rip the draft section from the bill.

The Senate then recessed until 11 a. m. tomorrow. Under an earlier unanimous consent agreement, debate on other provisions of the President's bill will be limited to 30 minutes for each Senator on the bill and each amendment.

Moves to Send It Back

But a large doubt arose as to whether the bill, rushed to House passage Saturday by a 306-to-13 vote, will ever go to a final Senate count. Several moves were afoot to send the bill back to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee for "exhaustive" hearings.

Barkley told the Senate he personally might support a recommittal motion, if the Maritime dispute, like the rail and coal strikes, were settled.

Earlier the House snapped up the Senate amendments to the permanent Case strike control bill, after suspending its rules to make a vote yesterday possible. The House Rules Committee charted this course. The committee chose concurrence in the only slightly different Senate bill to sending the measure to a House-Senate conference, where proponents feared it would die a slow death.

CIO to Protest Union Defeat at Smithfield Farm

Smithfield, Va., May 29 (AP).—Employes of the P. D. Gwaltney jr., & Co., Inc., today voted 85 to 27 against a CIO union in an election conducted by an examiner for the National Labor Relations Board, according to Julius Gwaltney, named as the company official to receive results. Gwaltney said one vote was challenged.

Lloyd Vaughan, field representative for the CIO, said in Richmond that the CIO would file an immediate protest of the election under provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

Vaughan said the general charge in the protest would be that "a company and conspiracy existed to deprive the packing house workers of Smithfield of their lawful rights as American citizens." He added that a number of supporting charges would be made.

Md Bankers Name Duckett

T. Howard Duckett, president of the Prince Georges Bank and Trust Co. o Hyattsville and Mount Rainer, was elected vice president of the Maryland Bankers Association, it was announced yesterday.

The election was held at the annual convention in Atlantic City Tuesday.

Frank W. Wrightson of Baltimore was elected association president.

Duckett is also chairman of the board of the Suburban National Bank of Silver Spring.

Attending the convention from Prince Georges Bank were William Bowie, vice president; J. Robert Sherwood, treasurer, and Arthur C. Keefer, counsel.

Ship Strike Talks Resume

Ottawa, May 29 (AP).—A break in the three-day-old strike against Great Lakes shipping was indicated today as Canadian Seamen's Union delegates resumed discussions with government officials.

In Toronto, Frank Wilkinson, representing the Canada Steamship Lines and other companies, said he was informed by telephone from an operator in Port Colborne that two ships cleared port there, one with its full regular crew, the other with some regulars. Six others sailed with nonunion crews.

Maryland Veteran Group Affiliates With AMVETS

Maryland's Own veterans' post of Capitol Hoights, originally an independent group, has become affiliated with the Amvets, Comdr. Robert E. Ennis said yesterday.

Ennis, a Navy veteran of both wars, will remain as commander of the reorganized post, and Norris Simpson has been elected senior vice commander. Ennis is also senior vice commander of My Maryland American Legion Post of Seat Pleasant.

Other officers are James A. Schonenly, junior vice commander; Thomas E. Williams, adjutant; Courtland E. Miller, finance officer; William H. McGrath, judge advocate; August Croissant, public relations, and George DeGrasse, provost marshal. The post of chaplain has been held open to obtain a member of the clergy.

Membership is limited to men who served in the military after September 16, 1940.

Dinner to Honor Thomas W. Pyle, Va. School Head . . .

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor will head the list of speakers at the testimonial dinner to be given Thomas W. Pyle, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School principal, on June 13, W. L. Lebling, general chairman, announced yesterday.

The dinner, to be held at the Washington Aviation Country Club, is planned as a tribute to Pyle's long and faithful service to the comunity and his pre-eminance in the maintenance of the high scholastic standard of the school, Lebling said.

Other guest speakers include Dr. Theodore Martin, membership director of the National Education Association; Dr. Thomas Pullen, jr., State superintendent of schools and Dr. Edwin W. Broome, county superintendent of schools.

Communists Banned From Brazil Offices

Rio De Janeiro, May 29 (U.P.).—All Communists officials have been withdrawn fro mpositions of trust in the Brazilian administration, Minister of Interior and Justice Carlos Coimbra da Lux disclosed today.

He added that in taking this action Brazil had followed the example of the United States.

Communist meetings in the open have been forbidden "for the sake of insuring the public order, but they can still be held behind closed doors," the minister said.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Behind The Curtains

AS MR. BYRNES was replying to Mr. Molotov's broadside the Allied Control Council in Berlin was unable to agree on the investigation of German disarmament which Mr. Byrnes had proposed when he was at Paris. Information about the disagreement is to be given out after the next meeting of the Council, which is to be held on Monday. But in the meantime Mr. Byrnes has told a press conference in Washington that the Soviet government wished to confine the investigation to the disarmament of troops, whereas the Western allies had insisted that the condition of German war industries be looked into also.

LIPPMANN

This disagreement is, I believe, immensely significant, and worth a searching examination by all who wish to understand the real conflict among the Big Three. For surely it is very strange indeed that they cannot unite in order to look into the military condition of the enemy whom they have just paid such a terrible price to defeat. What, we are compelled to ask, is behind this disagreement?

THE CLUE TO the right answer to this question is to be found, it seems to me, in the fact that the Russians and the British are appealing to uninformed public opinion, and are carefully avoiding what they cannot but know is the real issue in this matter.

The real issue is not, as the Russian propaganda pretends, how many German troops in organized military formations there are, or have been until recently, within the British zone. Nor is the issue whether in the Russian zone there are still German munitions plants which have not been dismantled. These are talking points which hide the issue, and when used by spokesmen of the governments, who know better, they are used in order to hide the issue.

MR. MOLOTOV, Mr. Bevin, Mr. Byrnes, the Foreign Office, the British Information Services, our own War Department in the person of Mr. Petersen,—and, I may add for good measure, Lord Vansittart—know perfectly well that the revival of German military power is not dependent upon how many German troops have not yet been completely demobilized or how many factories, capable of making munitions, there are now in Germany. It is silly for the Russians to pretend to believe that there is now in the British zone a German army, mobilized and equipped to fight them. But it is disingenuous of the British propaganda to think that by denying this silly allegation, it has disposed of the problem of the revival of German military power.

What is it in a country like Germany, which has the essentials of military power, that really matters? It is the officer corps—the professional staff officers and commanders who possess the military know-how. They are the creators of armies. Industrial plants can be converted or built quickly. Soldiers can be trained in a comparatively short time. The weapons of one war are soon obsolete. But the military know-how of an officer corps, especially of the high officers, cannot be improvised quickly, and if their military traditions and their art are lost, then a nation, though it have industry and manpower, cannot easily have a military revival. Everyone who knows the history of how German militarism survived defeat and disarmament in 1918 knows how true this is.

The real question is what has happened to the German officer corps. What has happened to the German officers who surrendered at Stalingrad and were for a time publicly pampered by the Soviet government? And what has happened to the German officers who surrendered in the British zone and were treated with so much professional consideration? Have they been made to understand, have they been effectively convinced, that their professional military careers are ended? That is the real question, and not how many Germans are still in organized formations or whether there are plants which could manufacture machine guns.

No one, I believe, who has been in Germany, Austria, and Italy, can doubt that the German professional officers believe, and have been allowed to believe, that though disarmed and demobilized, they continue to be an important consideration in the speculations and calculations of all the Allied military planners. No one will announce it, no one will publicly avow it, all when challenged will solemnly deny it. Yet it is true. And even if the German officers did not know how their conquerors talk when they are not issuing public statements, they would know—being highly educated in the military profession—that it must be true.

They know that when the great powers glare at each other across the military line which separates them, and talk about showdowns, offensives, conflicts, crusades, and the possibilities of war, their highest responsible officials must be considering the part which the Germans will play in the event of war.

HOW COULD IT be otherwise? This conflict, which some regard as inevitable, some as probable, and all as possible, would be engaged inside of Germany and Austria. Whatever the atomic bombs did, there would certainly be a clash on the ground in Central Europe, and in this struggle the demobilized veterans of the German army would inevitably play a great and perhaps a deciding role. What is the use of pretending that the soldiers and diplomats in Moscow, London, and Washington have demurely declined to consider what use they could make of these Germans? They would be military nincompoops if they had not considered it, and were not considering it.

The Germans know what their conquerors are certainly not military nincompoops, and that alone—quite apart from any private hints and assurances they may have had, or thought they have had—is quite sufficient to preserve them as a corps of professionals waiting, hoping, and planning for the day when they are invited to reconstitute the German military power.

THE ALLIES HAVE disarmed the old German army. They have dislocated and destroyed the old German war plant. They have demobilized the old German army. But if they have not deprived the military caste of the hope and expectation of a military career, they have not demilitarized Germany.

They have destroyed the military crop which grew to such might in 1939. But they will have left the seed corn of another crop which could well grow quickly enough in the wet hot climate of their suicidal rivalry.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Vandenberg's Importance At Paris

COLLEAGUES OF Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg are trying to persuade him that he must go back to Paris when the Foreign Ministers meet again on June 15 in a second effort to come to terms with Russia on the peace.

Childs

They argue that Vandenberg's presence is necessary to insure against any weakening compromise. They look to him for assurance that this country will stand on "principle."

In the cloakroom talks, this word principle is frequently heard. Vandenberg himself often employs it. The Senator from Michigan has made no secret of his satisfaction over what he believes was the only real achievement of the Paris Conference. That, as Vandenberg sees it, was the solidification of an American policy around the principles for which America has always stood.

This was the theme of Vandenberg's brief speech approving the report made by Secretary of State Byrnes on the Paris stalemate. The two men were in complete harmony throughout the conference. Now Van's senatorial friends want to be sure that he will stand behind the Secretary again.

BUT VANDENBERG is up for reelection this fall. He protests that his constituents will not understand it if he spends so much time abroad. He insists that he must go back home and find out what people are thinking.

"Listen, Van," one of his Senate friends said the other day, "You won't have to make any campaign. Pravda is making your campaign for you."

This was a reference to the frequent blasts directed against Vandenberg by the Moscow paper, Pravda, and the Moscow propaganda radio. After the Paris stalemate, most of Moscow's propaganda guns were turned, not on Byrnes, but on the Republican who had stood at his side. Statisticians in these matters say that only one other world figure—Pope Pius XII—has received such concentrated attention.

As far as Vandenberg's reelection is concerned, it should be a walkaway, even if he spends the entire time between June 15 and November 5 in Paris. He has no opposition in the primary on June 18. The Democrat who seems likely to oppose him is James Lee, who can hardly be rated a formidable opponent. Lee, assistant corporation counsel in Detroit, began his career as the "boy orator" of the Michigan Legislature in 1910.

THOSE WHO ARE urging Vandenberg to return to Paris believe that only by presenting an unyielding front in the face of Russia's demands will a decent peace eventually be achieved. They say that "appeasement" is certain to lead to new demands and that the end would be a world completely dominated by the Soviet Union.

In the light of Foreign Minister Molotov's statement in Pravda this week, it is hard to see how the two sides can ever come together across the terrible divide that is beginning to separate the world. Molotov took a line even more uncompromising than Byrnes in his report. He insisted that all details of the peace be agreed to among the Big Four before a 21-nation peace conference is called. This is the exact opposite of the stand taken by Byrnes with Vandenberg's support. It seems to leave no loophole for an acceptable compromise. So we drift toward catastrophe.

All the evidence reaching Russia's policy-makers tends to confirm their conviction that democracy is hopelessly entangled in its own contradictions and confusions. Those who have some knowledge of the trend of Soviet intelligence out of the United States say that the Kremlin is constantly being told we cannot resolve our internal conflicts short of a breakdown.

Naturally, the masters of the Kremlin welcome such news. It encourages them to believe that they can ignore the American point of view since it will not be backed up by power. This is the same mistake made by the Nazis and the Japs, who discovered the truth only after Pearl Harbor.

In Paris, Vandenberg learned with what intense concentration the world is watching our every move. The progress of the British loan through the Senate was a matter of immediate concern to all of Europe. As Vandenberg put it on his return, if the loan had not passed, the conference could have folded up right then and there.

Despite his statement that he would not return, the probability is that the Senator from Michigan will go back to Paris. Yet neither Vandenberg nor Byrnes will go with very much hope.

Molotov's Version

By Barnet Nover

Battle Of The Post-Mortems

IT IS NOW evident that the period between the first and second Paris meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers is not going to be a period of quiet stock-taking.

It is not going to be a period of unpublicized diplomatic efforts to achieve the agreement which eluded the peacemakers at Paris. Instead, we have a violent and highly vocal battle of post-mortems.

NOVER

It was Secretary Byrnes who fired the first shot. He did so in a radio address soon after his return from Paris. Avoiding name-calling and dramatics, he placed the blame for the failure of the conference squarely on the shoulders of Russia. There followed a supporting barrage from Senators Vandenberg and Connally.

On May 27 Foreign Minister Molotov entered the lists. His statement regarding what had happened at Paris was a masterpiece of dialectical skill. It was also a masterpiece of evasion and double-talk.

THERE WAS much in what Molotov had to say that was straight out of Machiavelli. There was also much that looked like a Russian diplomatic version of "Through the Looking Glass."

Molotov presented a picture of Russian foreign policy which does not exist on sea or land.

If we are to believe him, Russia is a nation which is always punctilious in the observance of international obligations. It is a nation which views with horror any attempt by outsiders to interfere with the internal affairs of neighboring states. Russia, Molotov insists, wants peace and wants it made quickly. It is eager to cooperate with the other members of the Big Four and to that end is willing to make far-reaching concessions to her partners. But they, in turn, do not want peace. They merely want to impose their will on the Soviet Union.

Typical of Molotov's straight-faced effort to change black into white and white into black is this revealing passage in his statement:

"Anglo-American capital seeks to subdue to its influence the economy of big and small states and to convert so-called economic aid to these countries into an instrument for achieving these ends. . . .

"On the other hand, the Soviet delegation could not disregard the national interests of the former satellite states that have now taken the road of democratic development and economic revival, since the Soviet Union cannot support the efforts of any state to enslave economically other countries, even though they may have been on the enemy side in the early years of the war."

SPELLED out this means that in advancing a loan to Poland, for instance, in which the condition is laid down that Poland is to live up to the Yalta program for the holding of free elections in that country, the United States is indulging in dollar diplomacy.

On the other hand, the monopolistic economic position which, with the aid of Russian bayonets, the Soviet government has sought to secure and has now largely secured in such countries as Romania, Hungary and Bulgaria is merely an exercise in generosity on behalf of "democratic" states.

Similarly, Molotov advances the contention that the American effort to secure bases in Iceland is proof of America's expansionist and imperialistic ambitions. As Mr. Byrnes has pointed out, however, Russia was long ago informed of our intention to seek a base in Iceland and raised no objection to it. Furthermore, we made it very clear that such a base, if voluntarily agreed to by the Icelandic government, would be placed at the disposal of the United Nations should that be necessary.

Molotov said nothing about the 300,000 square miles of territory which Russia has annexed to the Soviet Union and of the constant Russian pressure for spheres of influence beyond the annexed areas.

THE FACT is that the basic difficulty at Paris was not over the specific issues upon which, as both Secretary Byrnes and Foreign Minister Molotov have both revealed, no agreement was reached. It was over whether Europe is to have peace or not.

The trend of events from Potsdam to London to Moscow to Paris have raised very serious doubts whether Russia has any real desire to see peace restored in Europe.

The possibility must be considered that Russia is determined on forcing a continuation for as long as she can the present uneasy, uncertain and unhappy state of affairs on the Continent in the belief that she can make effective political and economic capital of such troubled conditions.

Such an attitude is so alien to our thinking, so remote from our own desires that many find it difficult to believe it is really Russia's attitude.

Perhaps Russia will have a change of heart in this regard. She has not won many friends by her recent policies. She will gain no new ones by continuing along the line she has taken during the past year. But should she persist there will be no alternative but for the other powers to act on their own.

Labor Legislation

By Mark Sullivan

Will Truman Sign The Case Bill?

BEGIN BY understanding that the President's emergency legislation about strikes is a thing apart. Understand just what it is, and what it is not. It is not a remedy for the labor problem, and does not pretend to be. It applies only to extremely limited kinds of strikes.

Sullivan

For the emergency legislation to apply a strike must be, to quote the President's words, in one of "those few industries" in which a strike "affects the entire economy of the United States." And it must be in an industry "essential . . . to the effective transition from war to peace."

Those are the kinds of strike which the President's emergency legislation would apply to. To illustrate how many and serious are the strikes which the emergency legislation would not apply to, it happens there was a coincidence.

At the very moment when the President was requesting his emergency legislation, there was a threat of strike (which has since taken place) in Rochester, N. Y.—beginning with a dispute between city employes and the Public Works Department, and accompanied by threat of strike by all unions, both CIO and AFL, in the private industries of the city. Such a strike would paralyze Rochester locally as much as the railroad strike paralyzed the country as a whole. But of that local Rochester strike the President's emergency legislation would take no notice. Nor would it take notice of hundreds of local strikes and threatened strikes throughout the country, harassing hundreds of businesses and communities, embroiling tens of thousands of workers.

No, the President's emergency legislation is not an answer to the country's labor problem, and does not purport to be. In addition to the limitation of scope, there is limitation of time—the emergency bill itself provides that it shall expire six months after formal termination of the state of war. Finally, the President's emergency legislation does not prevent strikes from starting, nor attempt to. It comes into effect only after a strike has taken place, and has gone so far that the Government decides to take over the struck industry. The procedure and penalties of the legislation apply only to a condition in which the Government has taken over.

AN ATTEMPT at answer has been written. It is called the Case bill, and this is to be looked upon as a thing separate from the President's emergency legislation.

The Case bill deals with several aspects of labor relations, including mediation, "cooling-o" periods, secondary strikes, liability of unions for breach of contract, fact-finding bodies, foremen's unions, equality of obligation of unions and employers to bargain collectively.

The way it deals with some of these subjects may or may not be the best way possible. The bill as a whole may be short of adequate. But presumption that it has been carefully written—and certainly that it conforms to public demand—is provided by two facts. It passed the Senate, after two weeks of debate, by 49 to 29. And it passed the House by an even larger preponderance, 258 to 155.

The Case bill exists. It is at present awaiting adjustment of minor differences in the two versions by the respective branches of Congress. Thereafter it will go to the President for signature.

THERE IS SURMISE that the President will be reluctant to sign When he was asking Congress to give him his temporary emergency legislation, he at the same time said there was also need for long-range legislation. But he suggested delay. He said, "the whole subject of labor relations should be studied afresh." He recommended a joint congressional committee to "study the whole problem" and "to report within a period of six months."

Just now, six months is a long time. Before it expires, there will be a congressional election in November. Soon after it expires, and before Congress could have time to act, the present Congress will expire and there will be a new one. What has been done about labor legislation would have to begin all over, in a Congress that may be changed by the election.

The immediate question is, will the President be willing to cooperate with the legislative body by signing a bill which both branches of that body have passed by large majorities?

Ex-Policeman Charged With Auto Fraud

Assistant United States Attorney Edward Molenof charged yesterday that Brian Dorsey, former Metropolitan policeman, had defrauded the District of Columbia.

Dorsey is on trial in District Court on a charge of forgery and uttering. He is alleged to have forged the title assignment of an automobile in order to have his name entered on the title certificate.

Molenof stated that the crime was against the District in that he had the District issue a certificate of title based upon the allegedly forged assignment of title.

The Government's case rested after testimony that Dorsey had not signed the title assignment legally and after Mrs. Margaret Knowles of 3146 16th st. nw. testified that she had agreed that both Dorsey and she should be co-owners of the car.

Justice James M. Proctor will rule on a defense motion for a directed verdict when the case resumes next Monday. Defense attorney is Bernard Margolius.

D. C. Army Pilot Is Three-Millionth Legion Member

Maj. Edward G. Millar, air force pilot and former Eastern High School star athlete, yesterday became the three-millionth member of the American Legion.

Maj. Miller

The 29-year-old officer received a special card from Lee Garland, commander of Leslie and Douglas McNair Post No. 52, the District Department's first all World War II unit. To mark the occasion, the membership card was autographed by President Truman.

Major Millar, a prisoner of the Japs for seven months after being shot down over Singapore, earned seven combat medals and four Purple Hearts. He is now assigned to headquarters of the Strategic Air Command, Bolling Field.

14 Nazis Hanged For Deaths of 300,000 at Dachau

Landsberg, Germany, May 28 (AP). Fourteen Nazis walked up 13 steps today to pay quickly for the lingering deaths of over 300,000 men, women and children in the Dachau concentration camp.

Tomorrow another 14 will follow. All 28 were convicted last December. Those who died today included Dr. Klaus Karl Schilling, 74-year-old physician, who was in charge of Dachau's malaria experiment station and used 1200 unwilling inmates to test his theories of immunization; Simon Kierri, who used Dachau inmates for pistol practice; Fredrich Ruppert, who once beat the inmates with a riding crop, and Josef Seuss, who strung up prisoners by their arms tied behind their heads and kicked and beat them.

Each man walked unaided up the steps.

White Teams Up With Baldwin In Maryland Political Race

John S. White, 47, of Colmar Manor, Md., speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates and candidate for State attorney general, joined forces yesterday with Representative H. Streett Baldwin, one of three gubernatorial candidates.

White

White was previously running without alliance. The change was made possible by the withdrawal from the race of Maj. J. DeWeese Carter.

Carter's name will remain on the ballot, as the legal withdrawal deadline has passed.

In a statement following the announcement from Baldwin's headquarters, White said he entered the contest after receiving 1000 letters from prominent citizens throughout the State.

"I continued in the race after the various candidates for governor selected their running mates and have been highly gratified with the reception I received in various parts of the State," he said.

White said he had publicly promised to vote for Baldwin who also has been indorsed by the Prince Georges Democratic organization headed by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer. The organization also indorsed White when he first filed for the nomination.

White said that after watching the candidates he has "concluded that . . . Balwin is better equipped by his personality, record and disposition to take over the reins of the Governorship which has been so ably handled by Governor Herbert R. O'Conor during the past eight years."

White referred to the tax mat Baldwin, John Funk, candidate for comptroller, and himself as a "winning combination that can give Maryland a sine, sensible and efficient government.

Carter said his retirement from the campaign resulted from doctor's orders to rest. He said his name was entered while he was en route from the Philippines for separation from service.

The United Democratic Organization of Anne Arundel County indorsed Baldwin and White this week, before the two became allied. This group is headed by former State Senator Louis Phipps, recently returned from war service.

A group styled the Veterans Political Organization, headed by W. Rae Dempsey, yesterday announced support of Baldwin, asserting to stand for "clean government and non-partisan principles."

White has been in the State Legislature for 12 years, was speaker two years and floor leader four years. He was Ways and Means Committee chairman and is vice chairman of the Legislative Council.

He was formerly Mayor of Colmar Manor and is a graduate of Georgetown Law School.

The composition of the principal Democratic slates is:

William Preston Lane, jr., governor; James J. Lacy, comptroller and Hall Hammond, attorney general.

J. Millard Tawes, governor; Charles H. Roloson, jr., comptroller and W. Earle Cobey, attorney general.

GOP Names Lawrence Michael In Eighth District House Race

Lawrence Michael, Arlington County real estate man, was chosen yesterday by Eighth District Republicans to run against Rep. Howard W. Smith of Alexandria, in the Congressional election next November.

Michael, former chairman of the Arlington Republican Committee and long an active worker with the party, was selected by unanimous vote of the annual District convention at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. More than 100 delegates from 15 counties and two cities attended the all-day session.

A native of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Michael has resided in Arlington for more than 25 years. He is a veteran of World War I.

The convention approved a resolution asking the Republican State chairman and executive committee to call a State convention for the purpose of selecting a nominee for election to the Senate next November, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Carter Glass. The measure was opposed by John Locke, Arlington County treasurer, sponsor of a bitter but unsuccessful fight to have Glass' seat declared vacant prior to his death Tuesday.

At the opening of the convention, delegates heard a scathing attack on administration policies by Representative Fred Crawford of Michigan, who called on fellow-Republicans to provide "leaders with convictions, who can go out and preach to the American people until they are converted."

He criticized the proposed British and French loans as financial agreements which are "fortifying these people in the field of foreign trade against our own economic interests."

The convention named 10 members to represent the District on the State Republican committee. They were C. R. Yardley of Charlottesville; M. H. Chambers, Fauquier County; Carl A. Marshall, Fairfax; Kenneth Levinston, Arlington; H. T. Pancoast, Loudoun County; Rylan Heflin, Louisa County; W. E. Trusler, Manassas; John J. Morris, Greene County; L. Frank Smith, Culpeper, and Thomas C. Graham, Alexandria.

Kindler Crowd Just Might Get a Belt Out Of Jessel's Musicale

THE DAY AFTER ITS PREVIEW the guess was ventured here that "Do You Love Me?", opening this morning at Loew's Palace, would panic the bobby-soxers and the junior wolves. That view still stads.

HadBertGranet dredged up a less timeworn story, or Robert Ellis and Helen Logan touched up its hoary locks with a rejuvenating tincture of originality, we would be willing to risk the forecast of equal popularity among the less hysterical picturegazers. It could happen, anyway.

Reginald Gardiner

In producing his latest Technicolor musical for Twentieth Century-Fox, George Jessel has craftily give nweight to the theory once advanced to your reporter by Lauritz Melchior that the way to popularize classical music with the masses is to dole it out on the screen in broken doses so disguised that its hearers will not immediately recognize it. Mr. Jessel goes a step further by assuming that modern jazz and boogie-woogie can be made palatable to the classicists by the same method. "Do You Love Me?" bears him out wtih some conclusiveness.

Sstrictly Lon-Hair

The tuneful and brilliantly tinted fable is introduced by a symphonic rendition of a hefty work under the conductorship of one Katherine Hilliard, a drab, horn-rimmed and earnest young women who has worked wonders of artistic development at an inland conservtaory of music. Her long-haired sponsors pile honors upon her and bury her deep under congratulations prompted by her impending marriage to the equally prosaic Ralph Wainwright. So Miss Hilliard takes herself off to New York to pave the way for the fall music fetsival.

On the crowded train she is plumped into the car with Barry Clayton's band, the hottest thing at music's opposite pole. Falling something short of complete appreciation of the boys' trickiest number, she is labeled a musical outcast and strictly tintype by Mr. Clayton. Theirs are probably two of the highest dudgeons ever reared.

There is nothing much Mr. Clayton can do about his, but a beauty shop does plenty for Katherine's. Shedding the tortoise shell and the hickory, she emerges a thing of dazzling beauty and is "picked up" by a famous crooner, masquerading as a starving mendicant, en route to the gaudy deadfall where the Clayton outfit is the chief attraction.

Bach vs. Barrelhouse

From this point on in, proceedings take the form of a spirited joust between the classic and the modern in music; between Groaner Jimmy Hale and Clayton for the butterfly's favor, and between Miss Hilliard, Impresario Herbert Benham and Brother Wainwright in the matter of stalling off that marriage.

How the whole thing eventuates in a back-home triumph for all concerned, save Mr. Clayton and Mr. Wainwright, is something for lovers of tinsel, glitter, melody, implausibility and old hat to see for themselves.

Master Jessell has dressed the business up to apparently the last penny in Mr. Zanuck's exchequer. He has cast it with heavy emphasis on the musical aspects of the piece and Gregory Ratoff has directed it with a keener eye to "entertainmen" than to dramatic integrity—standard practice in light musical fol-de-rol.

Maureen O'Hara, once out of her dingy chrysalis, is a thing of great loveliness who manages somehow to be rather less convincing than usual or desirable. Perhaps it is only because she is so overpowered by a variety of eminent male talents.

Gabriel Emotes

Harry James, as Barry Clayton, and his Music Makers, as themselves, are at the top of their form as exponents of the modern school, with Mr. James even acquitting himself with considerable aplomb as a straight man and pseudo-heavy. Dick Haymes purrs his way to high favor in a succession of ballads and Reginald Gardiner chips in with a suave comedy note, in the role of the harassed Mr. Benham, musical bigwig. It is he who conducts the climatic symphony, in competition with Mr. James' symphonic arrangement of Handy's "St. Louis Blues," to release Miss Hilliard from the faculty doghouse. The unhappy Mr. Wainwright is impersonated with appropriate chagrin by Richard Gaines.

Among the multitudinous supporting players, variously torn by the strains of such as "I didn't Mean a Word I Said," "As If I Didn't Have Enough on My Mind" and "Moonlight Propaganda"—interlarded with occasional bursts of the masters—are Alma Kruger, Harlan Briggs, Douglas Wood, Julia Dean and Almira Sessions, the last wto, remembered by the elders as former Washington stock favorites.

And that isn't all. Holiday amusement seekers will find Vyvyan Bonner's "Behind the Footlights" fashion show, "My Old Kentucky Home" cartoon and News of the Day agreeable complements of a pretty elegant feature.

Senators Put Metal Subsidy Into OPA Bill

By the Associated Press

A group of Senators from Western mining States wrote a one-hundred-million-dollar non-cancellable subsidy for copper, lead and zinc into the Price Control extension bill yesterday.

In the only other vote taken by the Senate Banking Committee, a previously approved section lifting price controls from livestock, poultry and dairy products was amended to make certain that eggs also will come out from under price control June 30.

Senators McFarland (D., Ariz.), Murdock (D., Utah) and Millikin (R., Colo.) backed the copper-lead-zinc subsidy clause, which applies only to high-cost mines. McFarland said the net effect would be to carry on the current subsidy program without change, but make it certain that the subsidies could not be canceled before June 30, 1947.

Originally the western group had proposed writing statutory price increases for the three metals into the legislation, but abandoned that effort yesterday morning.

Mitchell to Oppose Wage Control

Meanwhile, Senator Mitchell (D., Wash.) indicated he will move to strike the word "wages" from the stabilization act. He said he sees no use in attempting to control wages if the price of commodities is to be virtually unrestricted.

700 to Graduate From County High Schools June 14

Six war veterans are included in the list of 700 students who will gradute from 12 Prince Georges County high schools June 14.

The veterans are Samuel J. Geiser and Arthur R. Tomek of Hyattesville, Joseph S. Campbell and Roy Lench of Oxon Hill, David W. Hill of Surrattsville and Carroll S. Diven of Laurel.

Miss Eleanor M. Wilkinson will be the lone graduate at Gwynn Park High School.

Exercises will be held at Hyattsville, Bladensburg, Surrattsville, Laurel, Greenbelt, Oxon Hill, Mount Rainier, Maryland Park high schools and Douglass and Lakeland Negro high schools.

The school sessions will be concluded June 13 with the exception of a few elementary schools which will run a few extra days to make up the required 180 sessions for the year.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 29.—President Truman, who vacationed last year by fishing in the Northwest with Governor Wallgren of Washington, will repeat the trip next month. . . . It was Wallgren, incidentally, who in discussing Truman's plight in the railroad strike last week, said: "This is a case where everyone's screaming 'Kill the umpire'." . . . One of Union Square's best known stores will have its stock listed on the New York Stock Exchange shortly. . . . In the last war, when Bernard Baruch was head of the War Industries Board, he paid much of the expenses out of his own pocket. This time Baruch, as head of the Atomic Board, again is footing the expenses.

A war hero will run against Clare Boothe Luce for the Fairfield County congressional seat. . . . When Gen. Terry Allen's retirement becomes effective, he will take a radio post in El Paso, Tex. . . . Gen. Wild Bill Donovan has attended four public dinners in the past four days—a clear indication of his bid for the Republican nomination for United States Senator from New York. . . . A front-page story will break in Kings County within the next few weeks, concerning two men who were indicted for murder.. The administration of a former district attorney will be involved. . . . Churchill's confidential speeches to Parliament—two of them appeared recently in Life—will be published in book form by Simon & Schuster.

Tamaki Miura, who became famous for her performance in Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," and who died in Tokyo Sunday, inadvertently was responsible for one of the most popular hit tunes ever written . . . Thirty years ago John Golden wrote the lyrics for Dillingham's shows at the Hippodrome. He decided that he had had enough of this job. Dillingham, however, urged him to fulfill one more assignment—a song for a Japanese prima donna . . . At home that night Golden reported this to his wife, who said: "If the Japanese prima donna is Tamaki Miura, she's wonderful and you ought to do it" . . . Golden phoned Dillingham, and asked: "Is Tamaki Miura the Japanese girl you were speaking to me about?" Dillingham shrewdly said: "Yes." Then Mrs. Golden suggested: "John, in that case why don't you write a song about 'Madame Butterfly?' . . . Golden wrote "Poor Butterfly." It sold two million copies. But another Japanese prima donna sang it.

Dorothy Draper will open a decorators fashion clinic in New York on October 3. Representatives of 200 department stores throughout the hemisphere already have subscribed to the courses . . . Collie Small finished an article about Jimmy Dykes, for the Saturday Evening Post, on the day Dykes lost his job as manager of the White Sox.

Jack Benny said Sunday night that his wife had bought a new gown for his final broadcast of the season. "For 30 million listeners who can't see her," said Benny, "Mary bought the kind of expensive gown which makes Bergdorf call up Goodman to congratulate him" . . . One of the three top cigarette brands will be sold in a new package shortly . . . Park Avenue's newest skyscraper may be built at 277 Park ave., whose owners aren't offering leases to tenants . . . Harry Hershfield saw LaGuardia the other night, and said: "He's the kind of guy who asks you a question, answers it for you, and then says you're wrong."

An office boy working in Goldwyn's New York office resigned last week. He explained that he had a better offer from Selznick . . . There will be changes in the department of correction as the result of a suicide note left by William Freisinger, the prison guard discharged from Woodbourne Prison. The note made some revelations about prison conditions . . . Bert Lahr, who made his television debut for NBC last week, is enthusiastic about this new kind of show business. Limitation of telecasts to a radius of 100 miles will be a boon to him and other actors, he explains, for it means they will be able to tour television circuits.

Anthony Eden referred to himself and some other diplomats of his generation as "hoary relics of the pre-Atomic Age" . . . At a dinner recently given by Herbert Bayard Swope for his old friend, Lord Beaverbrook, the visitor, as usual, discussed American politics. Swope told him: "Dewey has gained in strength and will be hard to beat." Just then Beaverbrook answered a phone call and returned saying: "The man to whom I just spoke says you're wrong, and that Dewey can be beaten." Swope asked: "Who is your authority?" Beaverbrook told him: "Ed Flynn" . . . Charles Feldman bought the movie rights to Gerald Kersh's "Night and the City."

At the John Golden dinner Eleanor Roosevelt revealed that she was responsible for the first broadcast by Lisa Meitner about the atomic bomb. Mrs. Roosevelt said that she had read some small newspaper account of Miss Meitner's contribution. Niles Trammel of NBC said that he and his associates had missed the story Mrs. Roosevelt told him: "That's because it was about a woman" . . . Mrs. Diego Suarez, the first Mrs. Marshall Field, is at Doctors Hospital . . . The Paris magazine, Wings, has an ad: "Wanted. Companion for Trip to the Moon." The ad was inserted by Professor Anoroff, who is seeking a rich man to finance his atomic rocket studies.

Last week Kenny Delmar, who portrays Senator Claghorn, went to Cleveland and sat next to John W. Bricker, who complained to him: "Isn't it awful? They're calling me the Claghorn of Ohio politics" . . . Bricker then told Delmar this Claghornish tale: A Southern minister kept telling his congregation that the two worst men since the world began were Judas Iscariot and Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman. One day the minister took a trip to Sherman's birthplace, where the guide recited the details of Sherman's march to the sea. The minister returned to his congregation and told them: "I was wrong in telling you that Judas Iscariot and General Sherman were the worst men in history. There was only one worst man—General Sherman."

Gov. O'Conor Asks Curran Opinion On Registrations

Annapolis, Md., May 29 (AP).—Governor O'Conor today asked Attorney General William Curran for an opinion on "various aspects" of a situation which William Preston Lane, jr., of Hagerstown, informed the chief executive would deprive many persons of their primary vote.

Lane's letter pointed out that many Marylanders in the armed forces cast absentee ballots in 1944 to become automatically registered, but failed to state a party preference because they were voting in the general election.

It said "unless these veterans have since affiliated with a political party or are given a fair opportunity to affiliate, they are barred from participating in the primary elections."

Lane suggested that the Governor consider calling a special session to provide greater opportunity for registrations.

Winchester, Va., May 29.—Winchester Elks inducted 22 candidates tonight, bringing the membership of the local order to approximately 400, it was announced by E. T. Snider, secretary.

The Washington

Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

TOP ADMINISTRATION leaders were split wide open over the loan to France during a secret and significant meeting of the National Advisory Council.

Present were Secretary of the Treasury Vinson, chairman; Assistant Secretary of State Will Clayton, Secretary of Commerce Henry Wallace, Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board and William McChesney Martin, head of the Export-Import Bank.

Clayton teed off by proposing that the council approve the 650-million-dollar loan. Secretary Wallace said he approved but wanted the record to show that he supported the French loan for economic and not for political purposes.

"I want the record to show," countered Chairman Vinson, "that I favor the loan for good and sufficient reasons, both economic and political."

Up to this point, the meeting was mild. Clayton casually announced that he had checked into the legality of the present French government and that it was capable of accepting and repaying the loan, regardless of what happened in the June 2 elections. This gave Federal Reserve Board Chairman Eccles his opening.

"This loan should be considered on economic grounds and economic grounds only," he said with vigor. "Naturally, our Government is interested in political activity in other countries. But, I should very much dislike to have our Government accused of undertaking to buy a foreign election. That's the very thing we attacked the Russians for."

Eccles then proposed that the loan be held off until after the French election so as not to appear a coercive measure.

"There are political considerations in every loan," observed Vinson.

"We're concerned with getting countries back on their feet," Eccles shot back, "rather than as to whether the government is Socialist, Communist or a capitalistic democracy."

China Politics — U. S. Money

AT THIS POINT Henry Wallace spoke out and said it would be unfortunate if it leaked out to the French people that the United States had any major political considerations in mind in making its loan. This brought a rejoinder from Secretary Vinson.

"The half-billion-dollar loan to China was a political loan and we made it on the basis of General Marshall's plea."

"If I had been present," Wallace snapped back, "I would have voted against the China loan."

At this point, the banker from Utah, Marriner Eccles, jumped into the fray again.

"I think it would be very unfortunate," he said, "to make a loan just before an election in order to influence it. Besides, there would be no assurance that it would work out that way. The French might resent the fact that we were trying to influence the election. We learned that lesson the hard way in Latin America."

Then, looking at Assistant Secretary of State Clayton, formerly the world's largest cotton broker, Eccles concluded:

"Suppose the election goes wrong? Would we still give it?"

Clayton beat around the bush a moment, but said that the United States probably would still approve some kind of a loan though with more strings attached.

Eccles then moved that the loan be held up until after the election. However, Clayton, having in mind a promise the State Department had already made to the French government, protested.

"We've stalled on this for six weeks already," Clayton said. "We can't stall any longer."

Eccles than moved that the French loan be scaled down to 500 million dollars, but was overruled.

In the end the committee approved the entire 650-million-dollar credit from the Export-Import Bank, with some side adjustments regarding lend-lease.

Wants Counsel Switch

NOW THAT Mississippi's rootin-tootin' Representative John Rankin has $75,000 to spend for his Un-American Activities Committee, he is anxious to ditch Committee Counsel Ernie Adamson. Adamson is the gentleman who aroused public attention when he went on record as against democracy.

"I'm moving heaven, hell and high water," Representative Rankin told a friend the other day, "to get Bob Stripling out of the Army. I need him. Adamson has put us in a jam. Stripling is more discreet and his mouth isn't as big as Adamson's.

Robert Stripling, the man Rankin wants to get out of the Army, for a long time was counsel to the Dies Committee, and has the unique reputation of being one of the most deferred gentlemen ever to work on Capitol Hill.

For a long time the Dies Committee got Stripling deferred as an essential worker. Finally, in August, 1944, his Virginia draft board decided he wasn't so essential after all, and put him in 1-A. However, three times Congressmen intervened to prevent his induction. But finally the Army caught him. He got in shortly before the end of the war with Germany, and now Representative Rankin is pulling all sorts of wires to get him out.

Barkley: OPA Is a Corpse

AS THE Senate Banking and Currency Committee neared the end of its secret session, at which it virtually killed the OPA, Senator Taft, very much pleased with the day's work, proposed that the special decontrol board created by the committee a day earlier might just as well be abandoned.

"Its work has been done for it," Taft said, referring to the fact that prices were to be removed from meat, poultry and dairy products on June 30, rather than be decontrolled gradually.

Replied Democratic Leader Alben Barkley, who fought a valiant though losing battle for price control:

"Oh, well, let's keep the board. As long as you have a corpse, you might as well have pall-bearers."

Capital Chaff

CORDELL HULL now is writing his memoirs at his home in Carthage, Tenn., with the aid of Col. Andrew H. Berding, an old Washington newsman . . . In preparation for its Southern drive, CIO-PAC is opening a school of political action techniques in Washington . . . OPA's Robert R. R. Brooks, one of the Administration's top economists, returns to teaching at Williams College next month . . . Presidential Court Jester George Allen has shed 4 pounds on a new diet . . . Before going to the Naval Hospital with another illness, Senate President Kenneth D. McKellar, No. 1 on the CIO purge list, named a special Senate Election Investigating Committee loaded with Senators sure to probe the CIO . . . Bob Hannegan will throw his full weight behind former Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee as senatorial candidate against Hannegan's arch enemy, Tom Stewart, when Stewart comes up for re-election. That's one reason why Hannegan backed Cooper's recent appointment as Ambassador to Peru.

HEDDA HOPPER

Multiplied Manpower!

Hollywood, Calif., May 29.—Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Frank Sinatra will play together in a picture for Leo McCarey, it's said here. I hope it's true. What an awful lot of manpower and talent in one film. Incidentally, when the strike caught McCarey in New York he chartered a plane, rounded up other stranded Hollywoodites and said, "If you're going my way I'll take you free." . . . David Selznick really has an idea. I'm told he's inviting leading exhibitors from all over to be his guests in Hollywood and give their opinions on "Duel in the Sun," which expects to gross 35 million dollars. But all above 25 million dollars will be divided among the exhibitors who help put the picture over . . . Humphrey Bogart goes to Columbia for "Dead Reckoning." It's an exchange deal with Warners as a payback for Cary Grant.

Bob Hope

Now that Taylor Caldwell is in the news with "This Side of Innocence," Walter Wanger is dusting off one of her early books, "Dynasty of Death," which he bought when it was too hot to handle . . . Gene Tierney won't get to attend the wedding of her sister, Patricia, and Ensign Elliott Reed. She's too busy sharpening up "The Razor's Edge." . . . The stork may get Jan Clayton before Metro can put her on a sound stage . . . The Robert Balzers are divorcing after 10 years. Bob owns that delightful market on Larchmont. Mrs. Balzer is playing the lead in "The Avon Flows" at the Pasadena Playhouse. Looks like another war casualty. They were happy until she got to longing for a career after touring Europe with the Kit Cornell company of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" . . . The ashes of Mrs. David Niven rest beside those of Carole Lombard at Forest Lawn. They will be taken home to England . . . Byron Price will deliver an address at Harvard during commencement week. Price has won a real place for himself here as Eric Johnston's assistant . . . Anna Q. Nilsson is playing Loretta Young's mother in "Katie for Congress."

George Raft, fighting his pal, Mack Gray, in a "Nocturne" sequence, connected with a door and busted his fist. . . . Did you know that Jack Benny was dying to do "Life With Father" on the screen before Bill Powell got it? . . . Marc Connelly is touring the English provinces in "Our Town." It's a cinch he'll be acting on Broadway next year. . . . If you're thinking of booking Harry James, he's getting $25,000 a week for his concerts this summer. Adds up to a blow-by-blow account I suppose. . . . Warners won't hold "Humoresque" until next year. It'll be released in September in hope of getting another Academy award for Joan Crawford. . . . Talk of another film strike. This time I believe the studios would welcome it. All the majors have so many pictures ahead. However, I think the personnel will fool the bosses and keep right on working. . . . Well, what do you know! Lauritz Melchior actually bagged a mountain lion in Utah.

Hoagy Carmichael couldn't find a piano at the Windsor steak house; so he played his newest tune on 14 water glasses . . . Turhan Bey writes from Guam: "The wonderful thing about Army life is that you forget about who or what you were before you put on khaki.' If he'd forgotten he wouldn't have written . . . Glenda Farrell solved the honeymoon housing situation for Arlene Francis and Martin Gable. She's given them her valley home until July . . . Gov. Paul Snell, while here, extended invitations to Marc Platt and several other stars to visit Oregon for the salmon drive . . . Nancy Guild and Richard Baer are singing "the flowers that bloom in the spring tra-la." . . . Lawrence Langner has made arrangements to try out Cornel Wilde's play, "Legend," in summer stock. It's a romantic drama with music. Even the birds must have seen Cornel in those Robin Hood tights. A family of falcons is nesting in one of his trees. "If you don't believe it," he said, "come out and take a look." Not I. I want no truck with a falcon.

Snap Bean, Melon Costs to Rise; OPA to Remove More Ceilings

Prices housewives pay today for cantaloupes and honey ball melons are going up today about 1 cent a pound.

OPA said the reason is an average increase of 42½ cents a standard crate to compensate growers for higher costs.

The price agency also announced an average increase of one half-cent a pound in retail price ceilings for snap beans, effective June 3.

OPA also announced removal of price ceilings on a number of other commodities, mostly food items.

These include crated cheese, canned and frozen pumpkin and squash, canned broccoli, brussel sprouts and cauliflower, imported and domestic citron, canned celery juice.

Frozen carrots, imported canned carrots, frozen okra, frozen peppers and tampal, artificially colored seedless grapes sold as food garnishes, pepper sauce and chile sauce made from dried chiele peppers, frozen pies, pastries, and other frozen baked goods, calcium carbonate for feeding purposes, fur cleaner processed from corn oil meal, and canned vegetable greens other than spinach.

Base Prices Lifted

OPA also announced increases in maximum base prices for copper, lead, secondary lead, lead scrap materials and primary and secondary antimonial lead, effective June 3.

The price hikes were granted to offset what OPA termed "steady increases in costs, both labor and material, in the copper mining and lead mining industries.

OPA also ordered price increases for brass and bronze alloy ingots, and for copper scrap, copper alloy scrap and brass mill scrap. These are effective June 3.

The agency said another group of price actions to be effective June 3 will provide compensating price increases for brass mill products, copper wire and cable, nonferrous castings, metallic lead products made from lead or lead alloys and copper hardeners and deoxydizers.

Subsidies to Continue

With respect to copper and lead, OPA said subsidy payments through a premium price plan which has been in effect since February, 1942, will be continued. The purpose of this program is to encourage maximum production from high-cost marginal producers.

OPA said, however, that the new price increases for copper and lead "will make possible a reduction in the present subsidy payments of about $7,500,000 a year, in addition to covering increased wages."

Whisky, Beer Supply To Be Low Until '47

Famine Relief Grain Demand to Prevent Easing of Restrictions, Anderson Says

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The present shortages of beer and whiskies will continue until next year, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson said last night.

Demand for grain for famine relief abroad will keep present restrictions on brewing and distilling that long, the secretary said.

These restrictions are:

Beer, only 70 per cent may be brewed each month, as compared with the similar month a year ago.

Whiskies: Only three days distilling operations permitted each month, or a total of 24 hours operation per month.

New Review Set for Fall

Anderson's announcement said that a new review of the situation would be made in September, but that "it is extremely doubtful that an opportunity to increase the allocations of gratin for manufacture of alcoholic beverages can be made for the rest of the year."

Anderson said his announcement was made to "correct an erroneous report that he had promised an early increase in the amount of grain for beer production."

Invitations to 20 countries eligible to belong to the new International Emergency Food Council to its organizational meeting in Washington will go out late this week, Combined Food Board officers said yesterday.

The new group, which will take over the functions of the CFB, also will include representatives of UNRRA and the food and agriculture organization of the United Nations.

Around June 15

The date of the meeting has not yet been set, but at the Agriculture Department yesterday it was said that it would be around June 15. Original plans called for the meeting to be held next week.

"We wished to give all eligible governments time to consider the terms of membership in the new council," Maurice I. Hutton, British CFB member, said.

Other sources said that the meeting was delayed to await the return of Sir John Boyd Orr, director general of FAO, who has left on a flying trip to London. Plans for the new council call for Sir John to set up the secretariat which will operate it.

Price Rises Overbalanced

3. Declines in truck-crop prices over-balanced sharp increases in grain prices during the month ending May 15, the Department of Agriculture reported. As a result, the general level of prices received by farmers dropped one point. However, at 211 per cent of the 1909-14 average, the average price level was 11 points higher than a year ago.

For the first time during war years, production of automobiles has risen enough for current new-car prices to be used in figuring the prices paid index in figuring parity. The higher prices for cars had a large part in raising the index of prices farmers had to pay for goods they had to buy, two points above a month ago.

The Agriculture Department announced last night that it had extended the program for the purchase of dried whole eggs for export, chiefly to Great Britain, from 57 million pounds to 69 million pounds, the additional 12 million to be purchased in June.

The department also announced that distress shipments of grain will start within a week from Minneapolis to New England and to Northwestern States. About two million bushels of Government-owned grain will be divided between the Northeast and Northwest groups of States.

Dairy and poultry farmers in both sections have complained that the Government grain purchase plan had made it next to impossible for them to buy feed.

Soldier's Zombie-Like Wife Gives Birth to Normal Child

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Corpl. Leland Wenger and his wife, Mrs. Rhoda Wenger. Mrs. Wenger, who has been in a coma six months as the result of injuries suffered in an auto accident, gave birth to a baby girl in Allentown, Pa. Corporal Wenger, injured in the same accident, is in Walter Reed Hospital here

Allentown, Pa., May 29 (AP).—A 24-year-old wife of a soldier in a condition of "suspended death" for six months gave birth to an apparently normal child, her physician reported today.

Mrs. Leland Wenger's four-pound daughter spent its first day in an oxygen tent at Allentown Hospital. Attendants said the baby is in good condition.

Hurt in Auto Accident

The mother, daughter of David Marblestone of San Francisco, suffered hemorrhages in the brain last November when she and her husband, a corporal then stationed at Indiantown Gap, Pa., were in an automobile collision. Wenger is in Walter Reed Hospital with a leg injury suffered in the accident.

Still in critical condition, she had been fed through a stomach tube. However, delivery of the child was normal after rapid labor. No anesthetics were used.

Dr. Gabriel A. Schwartz said that Mrs. Wenger is not in a coma, but that only vital organs of her body independent of the brain appear to function and maintain life.

He said severe multiple brain hemorrhages resulted in complete paralysis of her limbs and facial and throat muscles so that she cannot move, talk or eat.

Tears Often Flood Eyes

Dr. Schwartz observed that the mother apparently is semiconscious because her eyes move, tears sometimes overflow them and they indicate occasional recognition of visitors. He expressed belief Mrs. Wenger might continue indefinitely in her present condition.

Wenger was advised of his daughter's birth by telephone. His joy was tempered by his anxiety for his wife.

Susquehanna Recedes After Big Flood Toll

Harrisburg, Pa., May 29 (AP).—Receding slowly in its upper reaches after causing death and widespread destruction, the flood-swollen Susquehanna swept into Sunbury and Pennsylvania's capital city today to make new thousands homeless.

After four days of heavy rains, the river and its tributaries raced out of their banks to bring death to at least 11 persons and cause untold damage in Pennsylvania and New York.

Damage estimates already exceeded three million dollars.

Latest reported deaths were those of two Red Cross workers and a young woman they tried vainly to rescue from the rampaging Morris Run in Tiga County, Pa.

Three Swept From Bridge

Cecile Kennedy, Red Cross field director, said William Hart, Red Cross chanrman in Morris Run, Edward Graham and Miss Innes Williams, otherwise unidentified, were swept away Monday night from a bridge. Hart and Graham had gone there to try to save Miss Williams when the span crashed and all fell into the stream.

The estimate of Pennsylvania deaths was reduced by two when the State disaster committee announced two persons reported killed by a landslide which destroyed their home near Morris Run, Tioga County, were found alive.

The United States Weather Bureau here, meanwhile, revised downward a forecast of a crest of 26 feet at Harrisburg, 9 feet over flood stage, to 22.5 feet sometime tonight.

Railroad Dike Crumbles

Washing away of part of a railroad embankment at Sunbury loosed the flood waters on the center of that community of 14,000 persons.

Hardest hit in the first day of the flood, residents of Williamsport, Pa., and Elmira, N. Y., dug their way out of mud and silt left by slowly falling waters.

Downstream at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., the crest hit 31.7 feet, well above the 22-foot flood stage, but dikes built after the disastrous 1936 flood kept the turbulent river out of the populous Wyoming valley.

Move to Higher Ground

Port Deposit, Md., May 29 (AP).—With the crest of the Susquehanna River flood expected to be reached here some time tonight, residents of some low-lying sections of Port Deposit moved from their homes to higher ground.

While police and bluejackets from the nearby Bainbridge Naval Training Center stood by to help if needed, the water late today still had not topped the rails of the Pennsylvania Railroad running through the town. Backing up through storm sewers, however, it had inundated low-lying areas.

Late in the day the water was 11 feet above normal.

Residents who witnessed the great flood of 1936 showed little concern as highway traffic on Route 222 between Conowingo and Port Deposit was closed. Railway underpasses were flooded.

Officials at the Conowingo Dam, predicting a crest between 10 p. m. and midnight, had opened approximately 30 floodgates. All of the dam's 52 floodgates were opened in the 1936 flood.

Truman Names Missourian To Tax Court

President Truman yesterday nominated Clarence P. Le Mire of Kansas City, Mo., to be a judge of the United States Tax Court for the 12-year-term starting June 2.

Mr. Le Mire has practiced law in Kansas City for more than 20 years.

The President also nominated Raymond M. Foley for reappointment for a four-year term as Federal housing administrator, and designated William Ward Smith, newly appointed member of the Maritime Commission to be chairman, succeeding Vice Admiral Emory S. Land.

By a recent White House reorganization order Foley's title will become FHA Commissioner unless the executive order is altered by Congress as provided in the Reorganization Act.

Lemire was named to the Tax Court to succeed Judge Charles P. Smith, 67-year-old native of Windham, N. H., who has been named a member of the Internal Revenue Bureau's council to administer claims for relief from the excess profits tax.

Other nominations sent to the Senate yesterday:

Ivy W. Duggan of Mississippi for reappointing as governor of the Farm Credit Administration for a term of six years from June 15.

Harry J. Anslinger of Pennsylvania to be the U. S. representative in the commission on narcotic drugs of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations.

FBI Analyzing Flesh Fragments Found in Sewer

Montgomery County police said yesterday that the portions of human flesh found in a Bethesda sewer Monday had been sent to the FBI for analysis.

The fragments of flesh were removed by workmen who were cleaning a clogged sewer at the former home of Henry H. Corens, 44-year-old painter, who was convicted a year ago of second degree murder in the decapitation slaying of his wife.

At the time of the trial the only part of Mrs. Corens' body which had been discovered was her severed head, found 30 miles from the Corens' home.

Ships Bringing More Area GIs From Overseas

The names of the following were telegraphed directly to The Washington Post by the Associated Press. There is no assurance that the list is correct, because it was compiled in Europe and at Pacific bases previous to embarkation, but officials said that the margin of error is slight. Relatives should not contact the port or The Washington Post for further information.

Our Humble Thanks

Not all the residents of the District of Columbia have as yet paid obeisance or rendered thanksgiving to our benevolent rulers in the House of Representatives for their magnanimity last week in passing a day-care bill for the children of indigent families in this subject city.

A proper sense of humility and appreciation was enjoined upon us by Representative Coffee of Washington—of the State of Washington, that is. "I want to commend the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Dirksen) also," he said, "for the very fine and diligent work he has always performed in behalf of the District. A man as busy as he is, a man so devoted to the public welfare, who still finds time to spend on the District of Columbia problems, deserves the commendation of all of us, regardless of our political complexions. That likewise goes for the District of Columbia legislative committee membership, who worked day and night in behalf of the District of Columbia taxpayers and the people of the National Capital. They are doing a remarkable job and deserve the commendation of this city, of its newspapers, the Congress and of the country."

How often we tend to ignore or forget the generosity of legislators who find time, despite their responsibilities to their own constituents, to deal with the problems of a mere million or so voteless citizens whom they permit to live here. Some of us, indeed, thinking of ourselves as taxpayers, have become so arrogant as almost to expect such attention as a matter of right. We tend to forget our place. Mr. Coffee's reminder is, therefore, a most timely one.

We hope that members of the House will not set us down as utter ingrates if we observe, most respectfully, that a day-care bill for the District children should have been enacted long ago. The important thing, however, is that the House did at last deign to give us some of its time and attention. And for this we remain truly grateful.

Indian Reaction

It is significant that, despite a growing lack of enthusiasm in some Indian quarters for the independence plan drawn up by the British cabinet mission, no major political leader and no important political body in India has so far seen fit to reject it outright. This has been true even of Mohammed Ali Jinnah and the Moslem League over which he presides. Since Jinnah and his organization are wholly and uncompromisingly committed to Pakistan—an independent Moslem state completely separate from the rest of India—and since the British plan rejects Pakistan, it would have been most surprising if the Moslem leader had manifested any enthusiasm for that plan. Yet his first statement on the subject, while critical, closes no doors on agreement. The whole question of the Moslem League's final attitude is to be turned over to the league's working committee and council which are to meet early in June.

The fact is the proposal made by the British cabinet mission has placed both the Moslem League and its great rival, the Congress Party, on the horns of a real dilemma. At the recent round table conference they had been given an opportunity to compromise their differences regarding the constitution for a free India. They had failed to do so. Indeed, it was because they had failed that the three British cabinet members and the British viceroy found it necessary to draw up such a plan for India. That plan follows a middle course between the extreme views of the Moslem League diehards and the Congress Party fanatics. For that very reason it is understandable why the little enthusiasm they may have had for it at the outset has tended to vanish the more they have scrutinized the plan. Each side is showing the very human tendency to take the concessions made to its point of view for granted while viewing with alarm the concessions made to its rival's point of view. Thus, while the Congress Party leaders are pleased that the plan calls for a united India, they are not at all pleased that under the plan the central government would have only limited powers. Furthermore, they insist that in the constituent assembly, which is to write India's charter of independence, the overwhelmingly more numerous Hindus should have more than mere parity with the Moslems.

The Moslems, aside from their chagrin over the failure of the British plan to favor Pakistan, are not convinced that it provides sufficient safeguards against action by a future Indian government that might infringe the rights of minorities. Yet neither side is in a position to forget the sobering fact that some compromise must be made. For years they have clamored for independence. If it is not to be the synonym for civil war in India, they must themselves reach an agreement. But old attitudes die hard. And now, as at the time of the round-table conference and for a long time before, the differences between Hindu and Moslem continue to stand in the way of the achievement of a great aim both sides profess to desire. Nonetheless, as Mohandas K. Gandhi now candidly admits, the British plan is the best "the British government could have produced in the circumstances," and he has urged the Indian people to accept the terms. His statement may break the log jam, but the final word of M. A. Jinnah on the subject is yet to be heard.

Doolittle Report

How thoroughly the War Department takes to heart the recommendations of the Doolittle Board on Army Reform will determine their ultimate worth. In any case Lieutenant General Doolittle and his five colleagues have performed a real service in calling for elimination of the arbitrary and artificial distinctions which have made Army service a period of second-class citizenship for many in the lower ranks. The board's conclusions show that considerable democratization is possible even in an essentially authoritarian institution. It is significant, too, that the report was made at the request of the Army itself, in an introspective effort to correct inequities for which it had been criticized.

Materially the board has suggested much that should be of value in bettering conditions, notably in the outlawing of special privilege except where it is a necessary condition of responsibility. Many of these reforms have been supported and encouraged by The Post. We are pleased to note the recommendation to abolish social distinctions between officers and enlisted men, including off-duty saluting. It is only fair that in such matters as food, decorations and military justice, for instance, all personnel be on an equal basis. Amelioration of the pay and family allowance scales to provide more fully for enlisted men also is long overdue. In asking revision of the promotion system to place it on a true merit basis, the board has struck a telling point. Too often the requisite for promotions has been merely the filling of a chair for a certain period, thereby stifling initiative of those with real ability. The board has wisely recognized also that to a considerable degree bad relationships between officers and enlisted men have been caused by poor leadership and abuses of power on the part of the officers. Accordingly, the board has recommended better training for officers, including prior military experience, preferably at least one year's service as enlisted men.

Perhaps the outstanding factor in the study is its concern with attitudes. "There is need for a new philosophy in the military order, a policy of treatment of men, especially in the 'ranks' in terms of advanced social thinking," the Doolittle report states. "The present system does not permit full recognition of the dignity of man." This, it seems to us, is at the root of the "caste system" complaints. Many of the traditionalists among the officers have conveyed the impression, whether they believe it or not, that they consider enlisted men inferior beings. It is this nobility-peasant relationship which is a denial of human dignity, especially to men reared in a democratic society. It will take more than the Doolittle report to change the attitudes of colonels in the middle stratum, whose ideas of what is best for "the men" are embedded and steeped in 30 years of officers' club reminiscences. The overcoming of tradition is a long-term proposition. But by asking for the abolition of material discriminations, the Doolittle Board paves the way for improved attitudes.

There can be no quarrel with the precept that discipline and unquestioned obedience to authority are fundamental to the mission of the Army. There is no resentment of authority when it is properly exercised. But there is rightful resentment of false distinctions which have tended to make gods of those temporarily wielding power. Reforms recommended by the Doolittle Board constitute a program of basic justice which can result only in a better satisfied and hence more efficient Army.

Aid To France

The financial agreement just concluded with the French government is less than the French had hoped for and far less than is needed to enable France to meet deficits in her balance of international payments during the next few years. Only $650 million represents new credits for the purchase of goods in foreign markets. The remainder of the $1.4 billion advance provides funds to enable the French to settle their lend-lease account and pay for Army and Navy surpluses located in French territory at a fraction of cost value.

However, since VJ-Day France has already been extended credits of $550 million by the Export-Import Bank for the purchase of goods originally included in the lend-lease program, while $100 million has been made available to France and other countries for the purchase of raw cotton. Judged by absolute standards, therefore, the aid rendered is extremely generous, however inadequate it may seem in the light of original French hopes. Moreover, discussions now under way look toward extension of additional credits to enable France to acquire merchant ships from this country.

The Government made it clear some time ago that Export-Import Bank loans for reconstruction purposes would be provided only to take care of the pressing minimum needs of borrowing countries until such time as the International Bank is in full operation. Thereafter funds for reconstruction purposes will be raised through the International Bank in the private capital markets of the world. The bulk of those advances, of course, will come from American investors. So we may assume that the present credit is merely a preliminary advance, to be later supplemented by funds from other sources.

The value of an agreement of this kind lies not in what it offers in the way of temporary aid but in what it promises for the future. Nor can the desirability of loans of this type be judged with reference to the terms of repayment or the risks of loss incurred by the lender. As the National Advisory Council on International Monetary and Financial Problems has stated: "There is little doubt regarding the ability of debtor countries (France, of course, included), after their economies have been fully reconstructed, to increase their national income sufficiently to handle the service charges on American loans and investments, providing an undue part of the national income of borrowing countries is not diverted to military expenditures."

If loans are used to modernize equipment, provide employment, and improve industrial and agricultural techniques, surpluses will be built up that will eventually put borrowers on a self-sufficing basis and enable them to meet their external obligations. In that connection our promise to assist France to secure an adequate coal supply from Germany will, we trust, be backed by vigorous action. So far France has received very little of the output from the Ruhr mines, which are operating at a low level.

Like the British loan, the French loan will benefit us by shoring up the economic structure of the borrowing country and bringing nearer the day when France will be in position to fulfill promises to abandon restrictive trade policies that are a sign of economic weakness. But the success of our efforts to aid others depends not alone upon how efficiently the borrower uses our capital to promote the ends we ostensibly seek. It depends quite as much upon our own willingness to follow the liberal trading policies we profess.

The test of that willingness may be long delayed. For as long as new investments made by us in foreign countries exceed service charges on debts due from those countries, our export trade will be stimulated and problems of repayment will not bother us. When net repayment of loans begins, however, the National Advisory Council reminds us that it will involve an excess of imports of goods and services over exports of goods and services. There the acid test of our professions of adherence to liberal trade policies will come. We remember what happened after World War I; let's hope it won't happen again because of a refusal on our part to face the fact that nations can only pay their debts by selling more than they buy.

A Raise For Teachers

One essential piece of legislation which must be considered by the Seventy-ninth Congress before it can come to a conscientious close is a pay raise for teachers in the District of Columbia schools. Congress has already provided for an increase of 14 per cent in the salaries of Federal Government employes. It has a bill before it, and is said to be quite ready, to extend the same wage improvement to District firemen and policemen. They need it and deserve it. The cost of living in this community has risen to a point which makes this 14 per cent increase scarcely adequate. The teachers in the District schools, long slighted, need an increase in their earnings even more urgently.

Until recently, division prevailed among the teachers themselves as to the type of wage-increase bill they desired. There is now in the hands of the District Commissioners, however, a bill which proposes a flat $600 raise for all the personnel in the local school system—teachers of all grades, administrators and all employes in the classified list of the Salary Act of 1945, as amended. This bill has the approval of all the teachers' associations, of the Joint Legislative Council, of the Teachers Advisory Council and of the Parent-Teacher Association. It is a thoroughly reasonable bill, and the salary increase requested is thoroughly justified.

It is extremely difficult to understand why the District Commissioners have been so slow in recommending this proposal to Congress. The news that at last they took it under advisement yesterday is heartening; but their decision to hold a hearing on it next week seems a needless delay. It is imperative that they speed it to the Hill just as soon as possible in order to give Congress opportunity to act before adjournment. The need of the teachers is far too great to permit this legislation to go over until a new Congress assembles next year. Justice, as well as a prudent regard for the caliber of our school system, requires that our teachers be afforded relief at once.

THE DARKNESS LIFTS

Never the dead will break the grass.
Their wounds may dry, our wounds may mend.
The dead have passed and this will pass.
The darkness lifts but does not end.

And fatted earth yields roses where a while ago they moistened her.
They earned whatever flower they wear:
the cross or star, the palm or fir.

And long the memory will be,
slower than ever their decay.
Look to the winds of heaven and see:
It is not light, it is not day.

Nor are the bells of triumph sweet.
O heart, thy hunger is immense!
The heart its angry drum will beat long after we have struck the tents.

Attitude on Foreigners

In August, 1944, Ernesto del Aguila and I, artists of Guatemala City, were chosen by the government of Guatemala as guests of your State Department to study at the United States Bureau of Engraving and Printing. We looked upon this opportunity to live and learn in the United States as an honor and a privilege.

In most respects we have not been disappointed. The attitude of your State Department, of the officials and the vast majority of our fellow workers of the bureau and of the many other friends we have made has amply justified our respect and admiration.

Nevertheless we, and other students from foreign lands, all guests of your Government, have been puzzled at times by the disproportionate influence of a small but loud minority who openly regard us as inferior for no better reason than that we are foreigners.

The animosity of this Fascist-tainted few has been apparent since our arrival in your country. We have, however, been puzzled rather than alarmed by this circumstance. An overwhelming majority have been so truly friendly, hospitable and kind. Why then does this insignificant minority of hate-breeders force its will upon the majority so often and so inexplicably?

For example: two weeks ago I and Ve-Za Hwa, a Chinese student, also a guest of your State Department, were advised by the foreman of the section in which we work that we were to be his guests at the convention dinner of the Engravers and Printers Union, AFL. The honor was, I am sure, as much a gesture of friendship to China and Guatemala as it was a compliment to us as friends and fellow craftsmen.

Two weeks later the invitations were retracted due to pressure from the prejudiced minority on the local convention committee.

The incident is no less embarrassing to the democratic majority of the engravers and printers local than it is to Hwa and myself. It is no less an affront to us as individuals than it is to our people and our governments.

I wish to emphasize that although our section foreman and, I believe, many of the committee members, were forced to concede to the prejudices of the few, the vast majority of our fellow workers have expressed in unequivocal terms their disapproval of this un-American discrimination.

I have respect for the men and women in the bureau who treat us as neighbors, not as "foreigners." There is no room in one world, certainly not in one hemisphere, for hate and mistrust, nor for the type of persons who foster it.

Building Problems

On our entry into the war our Government clamped on restrictions and compelled the building industry to cease operations, thereby reducing our production and building about 50 per cent. Although our future was dark, many of us decided to carry on and wait for victory and the green light. Little did we realize our sacrifice would be smeared by being called "jerry builders," "antiquated," "unprogressive" and many other names. As an American citizen and veteran of World War I, I am proud of our industry, proud of the little part I am playing in that industry.

After three or four years of nonproductive operation in the building industry and the total failure of our Government to plan for an early reconversion and price stabilization in this industry, it is obvious some of our leaders have tried to place the blame on the builders.

The home builder hesitates to undertake the contract of building homes when his progress is blocked by lack of materials, lack of experienced and skilled labor, strikes, prices and many other obstacles. The veteran will get his home and housing when materials are available in quality, quantity, and priced right, assuring the builder a first class job at a standard price to the owner.

Building cracker boxes, rushing the boom and taking a chance of throwing our economic machinery out of gear will do our Nation, our veterans and our industry no good. To achieve our great task it will take sensible thinking men in our Government, sound financing, good materials, good mechanics and builders to carry this program through the years.

We are well aware of the shortage in homes and housing. We are also aware of the shortages in every other commodity and we know our obligations to the serviceman. Therefore, it is my unbiased opinion the GI will be better off financially and in every other way if he uses great caution in deciding to be a property owner on this inflated market.

Building Vs. Bread

Which comes first, bread or bricks? With a world in ruins and millions on the verge of starvation, does this seem quite the appropriate time to sink six million dollars in our Washington Cathedral? It is not of paramount importance that this great edifice be completed immediately. Little will be lost by postponing the project. Certainly six million dollars diverted into proper channels will save multitudes of famished babies.

War Service Appointees

I wonder if veterans and others, especially the Civil Service Commission, realize the anguish that is caused war service appointees who were urged to leave private industry and aid in the war effort but now are treated as if they had deliberately evaded the draft.

All men were requested to appear for draft examination. War service appointees went through that procedure and were ready at all times to do as their country demanded. It is difficult to see why these people, who worked hard during the war for moderate salaries which were subject to heavy taxation and a high cost of living, should be ousted from their positions by any man who put on a uniform because that was his inescapable duty and because he was under orders.

So far as disabled veterans are concerned, they should be given every consideration. Able-bodied veterans are receiving point preference, and that is fair enough. More than this, it seems to me, is unfair to the thousands of war service appointees and regular Civil Service employes. It is based on the assumption that any veteran, no matter what his status or activity was during the war, must be given exclusive treatment over a nonveteran regardless of circumstances or length of service.

Not only war service appointees, but also regular Civil Service employes with many years of service, are being surplussed to make room for veterans who may have had three to six months service before entering the Army. Injustices stem from the present indiscriminate attitude that denies elementary justice to a nonveteran in order to make room for a veteran.

Perhaps if we examined the situation carefully, we might find that the nonveteran, just because he is a nonveteran, is more in need of consideration and assistance than the veteran.

President's Labor-Draft Bill

As veterans who find much to commend in the President's emergency labor bill, we would like to register a strong objection to the draft provisions contained in section 7 of the proposed legislation.

Section 7 does not make striking workers liable to draft under the same terms and conditions as other Americans. On the contrary, as the bill now reads, the President may draft a striking coal miner 50 years of age, with four children, send him off to Japan, deprive him of all GI benefits, retain him in the Army indefinitely and court-martial him if he fails to perform his assigned duties. As veterans, we are not proud to see the Army, which has so successfully fought to save democracy, now used as a prison camp to punish free men who refuse to mine coal or run railroads—whatever the reasons.

Perhaps the President does not intend to use the full powers of the bill; perhaps he intends only to draft a man to mine coal at his present place of employment. But any use of military power to force free Americans to work against their will and court-martial them if they refuse is fundamentally opposed to our principles of individual liberty. It goes beyond the Government's powers over its own employes; neither a postman nor a Cabinet member can be compelled to continue working for the Government if he prefers not to. It is contrary to the principles for which this country has fought since its creation.

As proof of its hasty conception, it may be noted that section 7 permits the President to draft only men who have "failed or refused, without permission of the President, to return to work," and then states that the draft provisions shall be applicable to union officials. Is John L. Lewis to be drafted for failing to put in his eight hours at the office of the United Mine Workers?

The draft provision was presumably inserted in the President's bill in the belief that no other measure would suffice to keep our essential industries operating during the present emergency. But we are living in a period of continuing emergency; much of our "emergency" legislation has been on the statute books for 13 years and necessarily so.

Moreover, there is good reason to believe that other provisions of the same bill, which do not deprive men of their fundamental rights, will produce the desired results. If not, other remedies are available which would not infringe so cruelly on the freedom of individual citizens. For example, the bill could take a leaf from the provisions of the Anti-trust Act, under which the Standard Oil trust was dissolved; it could give the Federal courts, on application of the President, power to dissolve labor unions which do not instruct their members to return to a Government-seized plant, power to bar its officials from any union office, and power to distribute its funds to its members. Few unions, and few organized workers, would risk the existence of organizations which took so many years to build.

Demanding the power to draft workers is tantamount to confessing that our Government is unable to resolve the present crisis within the framework of our democratic institutions. While it may be possible to make men work at the point of a gun, that is not the sort of statesmanship worthy of a democracy. E. G. STODDARD.

Dangerous Attitude

By Malvina Lindsay

"Tomorrow We Die"

SOME FEAR WE are on the way to what may be known in history as the Futile Fifties. The general helpless shrugging of shoulders concerning a third world war is growing, according to public opinion authorities.

Last time when our expected postwar Utopia didn't materialize overnight, we were ready with typical American hurry and impatience to throw the whole project out the window. We turned to our personal concerns, and isolationism. Today, with one peace conference after another stalling, we are showing signs of turning to our personal concerns, and an apathetic acceptancy of doom.

Some few are again naively seeking isolation, this time behind a stockpile of atom bombs. But the real danger for the future, public opinion students believe, lies in the quitters' mood that is spreading among the mass of citizens, in the defeatist talk of drug store, streetcar, beauty shop: "What's the use? Russia won't play ball. Sure, there'll be another war!"

This mood, as psychologists, race horse trainers football coaches and field generals will testify, holds the bacillus of failure, as it fosters mental impotence, drugs itself on the trivial and the selfish.

Can it be arrested before it causes too many people to turn in negative helplessness to those who are always ready with a positive program—the saber rattlers? Or must we inevitably drift into another postwar pattern of political impotency?

DEPRESSING AS THE picture is, there are yet signs that things may be different this time. One is a widespread movement, by those aware of the danger of the moment, to keep the American public from retreating into indifference or despair. Never before in peacetime have scientists, artists, writers, educators, intellectuals of all kinds, so dedicated themselves to a common goal—that of getting the American citizenry informed and aroused over its own and the world's future.

The way in which the atomic scientists left their laboratories to preach the meaning of the atom bomb is now an old story. More significant is that they have stayed on the job, giving tirelessly of their time and themselves, even their money, operating their tiny fifth-floor walk-up headquarters in Washington on a week-to-week financial basis, and yet losing none of their zeal.

All sorts of other organizations, large and small, are trying to prod citizens into thinking about the state of the world. In many of these are painters, musicians, novelists who have left their studios and desks for the platform and the mimeograph machine. Editors are complaining how difficult it is to get light fiction or humor because so many of their erstwhile entertainers now have causes.

YET IN THE 1920s the intellectuals were usually contemptuous of causes. They were the high priests of disillusionment and cynicism—and they had no small influence in spreading this mood. This time apparently they feel the situation is too desperate for the luxury of negativity.

A movement to awaken citizens by dramatizing the urgent problems of the day through amateur theatricals has spread to several cities. The spontaneous rise of prayer groups devoted to turning the present armistice into a peace also reflects the concern many Americans feel over the times. Organizations with peace programs are calling for volunteer speakers, saying their demands for these cannot be met.

Persons aware of what is going on agree that the imperative need is to get Americans to face and grapple with their problems. Virtually every discussion of atomic energy, the peace treaties, the United Nations, domestic issues, ends with the conclusion that the answer goes back to the people. The National Committee on Atomic Information, including representatives of 70 national organizations, has just launched a campaign to inform the average citizen on the need for international control of atomic energy.

Unlike the jingoist and the demagogue, those trying to make the public understand and act are handicapped by being unable to offer pat solutions, or to play upon prejudice and hatred. They disagree among themselves. Their programs vary, and all call for great patience, much work and unflagging faith. They even call for thinking, which is the last thing people want to do.

But at least these crusaders all can agree on one simple and basic thing. That they can talk militantly or preach loftily. It is a call to all Americans to stop the prairie fire of warmongering talk that is growing out of their childish discouragement with the state of the world, and to show some of the adult self-confidence and resourcefulness with which they have so long been credited.

Right To Strike

One of the first things that the American occupation forces did in Japan as part of their program to establish democracy was to give the Japanese people the right to strike.

It is strange that the American people would fight a war which caused more suffering and death than all of the strikes in history to give others the right to strike but propose to deny themselves this right. Slave labor is forced labor and labor without the right to strike against the Government or private industry is slave labor whether the American people like the name or not.

Three County Aides Cleared Of Misfeasance

Towson, Md., May 29 (AP).—Observing that its verdict "in all probability" would be used by some candidates in the current political campaign, a three-judge court today found three Baltimore County commissioners innocent of charges of charges of malfeasance in connection with sewer and water contracts totaling $525,000.

By its decision the court acquitted Christian H. Kahl, John R. Haut and Bremen A. Trail, who had been indicted for failing to advertise for competitive bids on contracts.

Judge J. Howard Murray announced the decision. Other members of the court were Judges John B. Gontrum and Frederick Lee Cobrun. The court gave no reasons for its verdict.

"We are not unaware of the fact," the court said, "that a political campaign is now in progress involving nominations to public office. The verdict in this case will of itself, in all probability, be made use of by various candidates to support their respectvie claims.

"This is unfortunate and is to be regretted, but we are powerless to prevent it.

"We can prevent, though, any misconstruction which might be placed on the views or reasons which we might give for the verdict we have reached. We can accomplish this by declining to give our reasons and in this case we deem it in the public interest to follow that course. . . ."

The commissioners formerly were associated with the Baltimore County organization headed by Representative H. Streett Baldwin, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Recently, they were dropped from the Baldwin ticket in the current primary campaign and announced their intention of running as independent.

Antietam Rite To Highlight Holiday in Md.

By the Associated Press

Maryland will pay tribute to her war dead today as the Nation observes its first peacetime Memorial Day in five years.

In cities, towns and communities throughout the State ceremonies have been arranged to honor all who gave their lives in the service of their country.

This first Memorial Day after the termination of World War II was expected to receive perhaps the widest observance in Maryland history. Most schools, banks, business houses, stores, government and private offices will be closed.

In anticipation of greatly increased passenger traffic, railroads and bus lines made preparations for such additional services as could be provided.

Governor O'Conor is scheduled to speak at the annual Memorial Day observance in the Antietam Battlefield near Sharpsburg.

In Annapolis, the Veterans of Foreign Wars post will parade in the combination Decoration Day and "I am an American Day" observance, while a wreath will be dropped into College Creek, honoring naval war dead.

Throughout the state, graves of the war dead will be decorated with flowers.

In Winchester, Va., The Rev. James B. Roe, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, will deliver the memorial address at annual services of veteran groups at the National Cemetery. The program will be preceded by a parade of veterans.

In Fredericksburg, Va., exercises for the dead of all wars will be sponsored at the Confederate Cemetery by the Ladies Memorial Association and the American Legion. Brief ceremonies will follow at the National Cemetery. No parade is planned.

State Firemen Plan Big Frederick Parade

Frederick, Md., May 29 (AP).—The executive committee of the State Firemen's Association is preparing plans for one of the most colorful and elaborate parades ever held in Frederick during the State convention June 19-21.

Due to the length of the parade and the thousands of visitors expected in the city the committee decided to extend the route beyond that covered by the usual parade held in Frederick.

Md. Blast, Fire Fatal to Two Investigated

Pikesville, Md., May 29 (AP).—Police sought today to determine the reason for a blast and fire which ripped through a portion of a home near here last night, killing a mother and her 4-year-old son.

The mother, Mrs. Kathleen Molloy Brewster, 32, was found in the kitchen of the home and the son, Edward Lancaster Brewster jr., was found nearby in his night clothes. Both had been burned about the hands and head.

Dr. D. D. Caples, Baltimore County medical examiner, returned a verdict of death due to "an accidental explosion."

Sergt. Walter Berryman of the Baltimore County police said the oven burner of the stove had been found open and unlighted and that the oven door was closed.

He added that the explosion, which ripped out window frames of the home, had occurred in a hallway on the far side of the kitchen from the stove and a fire which followed the blast had damaged only the hallway.

Edward L. Brewster, sr., returned home a short time after the explosion. Police described him as a former Navy lieutenant and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster of Chicago.

Tobacco Sells At $60.73 in First Baltimore Sale

Baltimore, May 29 (AP).—About 130 hogshead of tobacco were sold here at an average price of $60.73 per 100 pounds yesterday, the first day of the selling season, George Sachse, general manager of the Maryland Tobacco Growers Association, reported.

Altogether 81,930 pounds of the southern Maryland-grown weed were sold. The top price paid was $67.50 per hundred pounds. Two hogshead of low grade tobacco brought $19.50 per 100 pounds.

An additional 800 hogsheads are on Baltimore auction room floors awaiting sampling as a prelude to offering them for sale, Sachse said.

U. N. Group Sees Parade Of Middies

Annapolis, Md., May 29.—Military representatives of the combined might of the big five among the United Nations toured the Naval Academy today and reviewed a parade of the brigade of midshipmen.

Generals, admirals, and lesser officers of France, China, Soviet Russia, Great Britain, and the United States, numbering about 30, arrived here this noon when they were greeted by Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, superintendent of the Naval Academy.

They witnessed the blue-clad brigade of midshipmen, about 3000 strong, put on a military display enhanced in pisturesqueness by the variegated uniforms of the visitors themselves.

Twenty-four companies of midshipmen marched by. Bayonets glittering in the afternoon sun. As the officers were lined up in front of the covered reviewing stand to take salutes.

The group returned to Washington tonight after a reception at the superintendent's house.

Among the staff committee representatives present today were:

General Shang Chen and Rear Admiral Liu Ten Fu of China; Maj. Gen. Pierre Billotte and Rear Admiral R. Moullec of France; Admiral Richmond K. Turner and Lieut. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway of the United States; Admiral Sir Henry Moore and Air Chief Marshal Sir Guy Garrod of Great Britain, and Vice Admiral Valentine Lukich Bogdenko and Lieut. Gen. of Aviation Andrei Rodionovich Sharapov of Soviet Russia.

June Week Starts Tomorrow At Annapolis, Ends Wednesday

Annapolis, Md., May 29 (AP).—About 800 midshipmen will hear Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz deliver the chief address at their graduation exercises June 5, the day marking their entry into Naval officers' careers.

Another famous leader of the wartime fileet, Admiral William F. Halsey, is to administer the oath of office to the midshipmen receiving their commissions on that day.

This will be the climax and the end of June Week, the traditional period of festivities which starts Friday afternoon with the presentation of athletic and extra-curricular awards, a dance for athletic letter winners and the "No More Rivers" (to cross) ceremony.

Ring Dance Saturday

The latter is a customary piece of burlesque enacted by midshipmen to celebrate the end of their rigorous examinations. From then on, ceremonies crowd every day until Wednesday.

Saturday night will see the Ring Dance, at which second class men receive the academy ring while the prospective graduates hold their own hop at the same time.

Earlier that day, there will be drill exhibitions by all departments—in sailing, gunnery, engineering, physical training, and seamanship and navigation—while in the afternoon a baseball game and a tennis match will wind up the academy's extensive spring sports program.

Sunday morning the midshipmen will crowd into their domed chapel to hear Chaplain Everett P. Webbens preach the baccalaureate sermon, at 9 p. m. The middies' glee club and orchestra will present their gala performance of the year.

Brigade Parade Monday

At a brigade parade the following day (5:30 p. m.) there will be a presentation of academic awards, and at night the annual garden party will be given by Vice Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, Naval Academy superintendent.

Tuesday, at 5:30 p. m., Miss Dorothy Hargrove of New York, the 1946 "Color Girl," will present the colors to the 24th company of midshipmen at the final parade of the year, and that same evening the "Farewell Ball" will be held.

This last event is the only ball which plebes (fourth class men) may attend with "drags" (dates). For them it is the social highspot of the year, in fact, very nearly the only one.

At 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, in Dahlgren Hall, the graduates will gather to hear Admirals Nimitz and Fitch bid them farewell, and around noon a flurry of white caps tossed to the spectators in the galleries will signify the end of another year at the Naval Academy.

Bridge Across Chesapeake Bay Backed as 'Living' Memorial

Ocean City, Md., May 29 (AP).—A movement for the State of Maryland to construct a bridge across the Chesapeake Bay as a "living memorial" to veterans killed in World War II, has been launched by Sinepuxent Post, 166, American Legion.

The proposal, sponsored by Robert L. Cropper, president of the Ocean City Chamber of Commerce and Democratic candidate for State senator from Worcester County, has been submitted to Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, chairman of the State War Memorial Commission.

Cropper's resolution said the bay "is recognized as one of the most beautiful bodies of water in the world and one of our State's greatest natural assets," but that it had long been a barrier separating the eastern shore from the State capital, and Baltimore from others parts of Maryland.

A memorial bridge, Cropper said, would be "the greatest tribute the State could pay" the veterans, and at the same time would bring Marylanders into closer relationship with each other.

Cropper added that the proposal is strongly backed by the local Chamber of Commerce.

Such a bridge previously has received the indorsement of Representative H. Streett Baldwin and W. Preston Lane, jr., candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and of Hooper S. Miles, president of the Baltimore Association of Commerce.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Reemployment Rules Likely to Be Revised

SENIORITY: The Supreme Court ruling that legally killed superseniority for veterans may bring about a revision of reemployment rules in the Federal service. The Civil Service Commission has ordered its legal division to give it a report on the decision and the effect it may have on veterans who have returned or will return to Government.

Kluttz

Meanwhile, a Civil Service spokesman said it was his opinion that the decision would have "very little" bearing on Federal personnel policies. He said the only group of veterans whose status might be involved were the A-1 pluses. Veterans in that classification are those who have permanent status and who are serving a year of employment guaranteed to them by the Selective Service Act.

On the other hand, a union official at the Naval Gun Factory said the decision would stop the laying off of men wtih long years of service to make openings for returning veterans with several years' service. He explained that old-timers with up to 20 years' service had been replaced with veterans who had 5 or less years of service.

Navy officials say they are studying the problem, but they can do nothing about it. "We operate," he explained, "under the laws and rules and regulations of Civil Service. In this case, Civil Service must order a revision of its regulations before we can act." He added the opinion that the Supreme Court ruling would not require a major change in Navy personnel policies.

UNRRA: This international agency will go on a 40-hour week for the summer months. The shorter work week will start this week. United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation has been working a 44-hour week. The work week will again be considered on September 1.

Up for action at UNRRA is a proposed pay raise. The increase would become effective on Saturday.

LABOR: Phil Hannah, secretary of the Ohio State Federation of Labor, has AFL support for appointment as Assistant Secretary of Labor. John Gibson will be the CIO's assistant secretary. He's now special assistant to the Secretary and is widely regarded as one of the ablest young men in Government.

NOTES: Al Lubin has resigned at Commerce to return to Civilian Production Administration as public relations adviser to Jack Small. . . . Fred Martin, a law analyst, retires tomorrow from Social Security . . . The President nominated for reappointments to full terms yesterday: Ivy W. Duggan as Farm Credit administrator, and Raymond Foley as Federal Housing administrator.

NAVY: The training section and the employe relations office in the Bureau of Yards and Docks were ordered abolished yesterday as of tomorrow. The employes got just two days' notice. They appealed and now they may get the full 30 days' notice as urged by Civil Service.

LABOR is proud of its Conciliation Service, but it will lose it for all practictal purposes if the Case bill becomes law. The service would be the backbone of the Federal mediation board as proposed in the Case bill. The department would do the housekeeping work for the proposed board but it would not take orders from the Secretary. The five board members would be paid $12,000 each.

ATTACK: French officials who were here to negotiate the loan are reported to have unfolded this part of a long-range plan: Their country, it seems, is short of industrial workers. So, to get more people in industry, it plans to force employes out of government.

UPWA: The extreme leftwingers who have dominated Local 1 of CIO's United Public Workers, have all but agreed to disavow reluctantly the communist line foreign policy resolution adopted by the Atlantic City convention.

The local claims 3000 members and it is the largest Federal unit in the union. Its left-wing leaders got the local to stand behind the pro-Russian resolution shortly after it was approved by the convention. Only a handful of members supported a move to condemn the convention.

But now the left-wingers have agreed the union's foreign policy stand should be reconsidered and they will propose that the local indorse the CIO-PAC foreign policy at the June 5 membership meeting. The move may provoke a contorversy as the compromise resolution will propose a vote of confidence in the union's leaders.

The left-wingers are drafting a second resolution which would denounce what they say are "red-baiters" in and out of the union. Among the rank and file, this is known as the "face-saver" for the left-wingers.

The OPA branch whose chairman, William W. Stafford, was a stanch supporter of the pro-Russian resolution, has indorsed the CIO-PAC stand on foreign affairs. The branch condemned John Cramer of the Washington Daily News, and this writer for what it charged was "red-baiting, falsifications and distortions." Speaking for myself, I'd like to see a bill of particulars of these charges.

REVENUE: Morton P. Fisher of Baltimore is the latest tax attorney to be appointed to Internal Revenue's excess profits tax counsel.

Frederick Teachers Get $25 a Month Boost

Frederick, Md., May 29 (Spl).—A flat increase of $5 a month for Frederick County public school teachers, beginning the first of the next fiscal year in September, has been announced by the County Board of Education. The increase is expected to cost the county approximately $70,000, Eugene W. Pruitt, superintendent of education, stated.

House Group Approves Four Projects in Va.

By the Associated Press

Congressional committee approval has been given four Virginia flood control projects, including the $17,755,000 protection for Fredericksburg.

The House Flood Control Committee reported a bill authorizing construction of the Salem Church reservoir above Fredericksburg on the Rappahannock River; dams at Gathright and Falling Spring, on Jackson River above Covington, at an estimated cost of 11 million dollars; flood protection work at Waynesboro on the South River, estimated to cost $1,431,000, and flood-protection works at Galax, on Chestnut Creek, estimated cost $276,125.

Those opposing the Gathright and Falling Spring reservoirs testified valuable lands would be flooded and that the projects would be of little value to flood control generally. Covington residents supported the project as a means of alleviating stream pollution as well as giving a regulated water flow.

The Rappahannock and Jackson River projects were opposed at public hearings. There was no opposition to the local protective works at Waynesboro and Galax.

Opponents of the Salem Church reservoir expressed fear the flood dangers for Remington and other communities near the head of the proposed lake would be increased. Army engineers, however, said the multi-purpose dam would not add to this danger.

Assessment Figures Cited In Vepco Case

Richmond, Va., May 29 (AP).—Figures placed before the State Corporation Commission today showed Richmond City assessments of four Richmond hotels on January 1, 1945, totaled $3,031,000 compared with the owners' appraisal of $4,643,000 a month earlier.

These statistics went into the record during cross examination of Robert L. Saville, member of the Richmond board of assessors, a city witness in Richmond's litigation to have the SCC increase assessments of public service company property from 40 to 100 per cent of fair market value.

Assessments of lots in the Miller & Rhoads Department Store block between 5th and 6th sts. in Richmond also figured in the testimony by which Virginia Electric & Power Co. showed that assessments of all these properties had been unchanged since 1939, with the exception of the building owned by Miller & Rhoads which had undergone a number of improvements.

The cross-examination by T. Justin Moore, counsel for Vepco, apparently was designed to demonstrate that while the city theoretically assesses real property at 100 per cent of fair market value, its assessments actually are lower. Vepco and Richmond differ, however, on what the term "fair market value" means.

State Gets CPA Permit to Erect Health Building

Baltimore, May 29 (AP).—The State Health Department has Civilian Production Administration permission today to begin immediate construction of a new headquarters building in Baltimore, but the department estimates it will cost twice the $500,000 alloted it by the Board of Public Works.

The three-story building is to be erected on former Goucher College property and two old college buildings there will be renovated for health department occupancy.

The Board of Public Work approved a $500,000 appropriation for the proposed remodeling and construction. Reflecting higher materials and labor costs, the department of health's CPA application estimated the probable cost at about $1,000,000.

Bids on the project will be opened here at noon on Tuesday in present health department headquarters here.

Apple Scab Noted In Md. Orchards

Hancock, Md., May 29 (AP).—Dr. Castillo Graham, field entomologist at the Hancock research station, reports that apple scab is appearing on foliage of all scab-susceptible varieties in orchards of this section.

"There is every indication that this is going to be a scab year," Graham said, adding that one way to combat infection is to cover foliage with sulphur spray.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, May 29.—The fidgety spectator in the mezzanine box reserved for the royalty of the Yankee organization was Joe McCarthy, watching the Yankees play a ball game today in which he wasn't managing the club for the first time in 15 years. Late in the contest the press box got the word that McCarthy would hold a press conference after the game.

POVICH

McCarthy, whose "resignation" was accepted by President Larry MacPhail last Friday, entered into the room reserved for the press in the stadium catacombs, and said "Boys, whenever you want me to start talking I'm ready."

Before that there was handshaking all around. Press box inmates, who in their time had taken many a belt at McCarthy, milled about him with contrite mean. Here, after all was a nice guy, they felt, and they inquired solicitously and sincerely about his health.

"A couple of nights sleep will cure a lot of things," said McCarthy. "Now I'm feeling all right. They told me you'd like a press conference with me, and you can have anything you like. Are we ready?" Somebody said "Ok Joe," and McCarthy began a pretty little speech.

"I'm not going to make any speech," he said. "What I want to do is thank you fellows for being as nice as you were these last 15 years. I don't have to tell you I appreciate some of the things you didn't write about me. There's no sense kidding anybody. I was a pretty fair target a lot of times, and I want to thank you for laying off."

There never was a cross word with Larry MacPhail, he said. "He has been a great guy to work for, and I want that understood. I'm enjoying this little vacation of mine, watching ball games from a box seat." And then, with obvious pride in the Yankee spirit that he developed, the determination to win that he instilled in the Yankee team that won him more pennants than any other manager in history, he said "I'm still a Yankee."

McCarthy, the tough, driving manager of Yankee ball teams, was now in a mellow mood, and something of a philosopher, too. "There are changes to be made all the time in everything and they caught up with me, too." It was said without bitterness, although the hint was there that his "resignation" was something other than that.

"I'll be allright," he said. "Nobody has to worry about me. Baseball has been good to me, and nobody is going to find me in the gutter."

One baseball writer piped up, "If that does happen, it will be the top gutter, Joe."

"I'll be all right," Joe insisted, and then he worked up a smile and sail "I've always been kind to the poor."

Right now he's going back to his cows and mules on his Buffalo farm," he said, and Photographer Izzy Kaplan said "Be careful, don't get kicked."

Did he like watching a ball game when he wasn't managing the clubs? "Well, it was different," said Joe. "For 15 years as manager of the Yankees, I didn't have time to spit, or go to the water fountain. There aren't so many things to watch from upstairs.

As for the new Yankee manager, Bill Dickey, McCarthy said, "Great feller, give him a chance like you did me when I came into New York. The Yankees will win with Bill. He knows how. They picked the right guy.

"I'll tell you about Dickey. He was telling me a couple of weeks ago, that he didn't feel like catching that day. His wife was in the hospital and he was down. I asked him as a favor to catch a young pitcher we were working that day, who needed Dickey's kind of catching and Bill said 'sure' and he worked and we won the ball game."

What was Dickey's big worry going to be as a fledging manager? Somebody asked Joe. Was it pitching, and when to change pitchers? "No I wouldn't say that," said McCarthy. "There are a lot of things about managing a ball club. You have to watch 'em all. But if you want to be happy, don't notice too many little things that aren't important.' "

Inevitably they asked him, what his plans were. Was he thinking of coming back to baseball some day. "Oh, let's not talk about that," he said, hinting with the broadest eloquence that, sure, he was coming back to baseball the first time the right managerial job was offered.

16 Teams Come Back . . .

'C' Club Track to Be Resumed Today; War Dead Honored

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The twenty-eighth annual "C" Club track and field meet, interrupted three weeks ago because of rain, will resume today at 1 p. m. at Central High Stadium with 16 teams representing schools in Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia and North Carolina participating.

Appropriately enought, this year's meet, the first since the end of the war and coming on Memorial Day, has been dedicated to the 137 Central alumni who lost their lives during World War II. The meet will open with the blowing of taps by Cornetist Joe Penso of Central, who will later represent the Vikings in several events.

Before the rains came May 18, preliminary heats in the 100-yard dash and the 120-yard high hurdles as well as three of the four sections of the half-mile had been run off. And the three trial throws of the shot had narrowed the field to five contestants.

Trio Earned Notice

Dprham, N. C., High, whose faculty moved the final examination period so that its State track champions could make the return trip to Washington, occupy the favorite's role, based on the performances of three of its mainstays and R. L. McDonald in the discuss, will be favored to win.

However, Baltimore's Polytechnical Institute, with George McGowan in the 100 and 220 and Charlie Andrews in the broad jump, are rated Durham's closest competitors. The only area teams conceded even an outside chance of coming through with the victory are Woodrow Wilson, interhigh champion and George Washington of Alexandria, metropolitan titleholder.

If a fast track prevails, at least two and possibly four meet records may be broken. Poly's McGowan in the 220 and Durham's McLeod in the low hurdles have been clocked at other meets in times better than the "C" Club standards. McLeod is also considered a threat to the high hurdles mark, and Wilson's Paul Ostrye, who earlier in the year set new interhigh and metropolitan 440-yard records, has been timed within three-tenths of a second of "C" Club standard.

An added feature will be the 480-yard relay staged by four-man teams representing the eight District interhigh baseball squads. Adding incentive to the race are the prizes awaiting the winners. To the No. 1 team goes 10 box seat tickets to the Detroit-Washington baseball game Saturday, while to the second and third teams go four reserved seats to the same game.

Teams entered in the meet are: Anscostia, Coolidge, Central, Eastern, McKinley; Roosevelt, Wilson, and Western of Washington; Polytechnic Institute, Mount St. Josephs and Patterson Park of Baltimore; Bullis Prep and Montgomery Blair of Silver Spring; George Washington and Staunton Military Academy of Virginia and Durham High of North Carolina.

Stranahan Golf Winner; Evans Beaten

Southport, Eng., May 29 (U.P.).—Frank Stranahan, the muscular young son of a Toledo, Ohio, millionaire, became the favorite to win the British Amateur Golf championship today as Charles (Chick) Evans of Chicago, the only other American entrant, was eliminated in a fourth round match.

Falling out of the tourney—first since the war—along with Evans was Alec Kyle, the pre-meet favorite and defending champion.

With the elimination of Kyle, who won the event when it last was held in 1939, Stranahan took over the favorite's role because of the easy manner in which he defeated R. M. Robinson of England, 5 and 4.

Shooting a 37 on the outgoing nine to gain a four up margin, Stranahan narrowly missed a hole in one on the par three seventh when his tee shot stopped inches short of the cup. He halved the tenth with a par four and then had his advantage reduced to three up when he three-putted the eleventh. Although in the rough with his drive on the twelfth, he recovered nicely with a pitch shot to halve the hole. He made his margin four up again with a birdie two on the thirteenth and closed out the match when he won the fourteenth with a par four.

The veteran Evans was eliminated by Capt. E. S. Browne, one up, in a hard fought match that went an extra hole. Driving poorly and putting erratically, Evans was one down at the turn as he three-putted the ninth. His playing improved on the second nine, however, and they finished the eighteenth all even. But his driving went sour again on the first extra hole and the bespectacled British Army captain won out.

Leonard Crawley, a Walker Cup team star, downed the favored Kyle in a fourth-round match that went two extra holes.

Williams, Cerdan Sign

New York, May 29 (U.P.).—Marcel Cerdan, French middleweight boxing champion, and Holman Williams of Chicago were signed today for a 10-round bout in Paris on June 21 in the first European promoting venture of Mike Jacobs.

V. Lombardi, Dodgers Trip Giants, 5 to 1

Brooklyn, May 29 (AP).—Little Vic Lombardi became the first National League pitcher to notch seven victories today as he throttled the New York Giants on five hits in pitching the pace-setting Brooklyn Dodgers to a 5-1 triumph.

Lombardi's win enabled the Dodgers to maintain their two-game margin over the runner-up St. Louis Cardinals who defeated the Cubs in Chicago.

The diminutive southpaw's victory, his seventh straight over the Giants without a defeat in two years, snapped a five-game New York winning streak.

Benny Warren's homer in the fourth inning spoiled his bid for a shutout.

The Dodgers pushed three runs across the plate in the first inning on three singles and two walks to knock Rookie Monte Kennedy out of the box.

In the seventh frame, the Dodgers rocked Bill Voiselle, fifth Giant hurler, for their final two runs. Pinch Hitter Ed Stevens drove in both with a single with the bases loaded.

Dixie Walker, popular Brooklyn outfielder, returned to action after a five-day layoff and collected two hits in four trips to the plate. Walker was suspended by League President Ford Frick last week for fighting with Shortstop Len Merullo of the Chicago Cubs.

Hal Newhouser Beats Indians On 5 Hits, 4-1

Cleveland, May 29 (AP).—Hal Newhouser limited the Cleveland Indians to five hits today as the Detroit Tigers took the Series finale, 4 to 1, giving them five victories in six starts against the Tribe.

The Bengals raked three Cleveland hurlers for eight blows, collecting three off Allie Reynolds, two off Bob Lemon and three more off Joe Krakauskas.

A three-run scoring spree in the third sewed up the game for the Tigers. Newhouser walked, but was forced at second when Ken Keltner picked up Ed Lake's hard smash and threw to Dutch Meyer. Lake moved to third on Ed Mayo's single, and both runners scored on Walter Evers' triple to right field. On Lou Boudreau's wild throw to third, Evers also crossed the plate.

Reds Halt Pirates' Streak, 7 to 6

Pittsburgh, May 29 (AP).—Cincinnati snuffed out a Pittsburgh winning streak at four games today by taking a 7-to-6 victory. Two singles and an infield out gave the Reds an eighth-inning run which broke a 6-to-6 deadlock before a meager crowd of 4112.

Nine pitchers took the mound in the two-hour and 34-minute game.

Frederick Picks All-Star Team

Winchester, Va., May 29.—Coaches of the seven-team Frederick-Clarke Baseball League have named a 1946 all-star nine.

Clem, of Middletown, with a record of seven wins and one loss, was the unanimous choice for pitcher. Grove, Stephens City, is catcher. He bats .236.

Dalton, of Middletown, who is hitting a lusty .349 was placed on first. Gainesboro placed Thompson on second and Omps third. They are batting .298 and .351 respectively.

Armel, speedy Stonewall High shortstop, was picked to complete the infield.

Nelson Grabs 6-Hole Lead Over Burton

Newton, Mass., May 29 (AP).—Playing his customary deadly accurate game, Byron Nelson, the P. G. A. titlist who had been a leading light in American golf for the past three years, gained a six-hole lead on British Open Champion Dick Burton during the first half of their 36-hole international challenge match today at the Charles River Country Club.

The Briton, who arrived here two days ago, was troubled by a slice on most of the long stretches on the 6415-yard layout, which played heavy as a result of 48 hours of rain.

Uncertain of Greens

He also was uncertain on the greens and, before taking off with Nelson for Mamaroneck, N. Y., where they will play their second 18 tomorrow as a part of the Goodall round-robin tourney, he complained: "I didn't have any confidence in my putting."

Nelson, who set up Charles Rivers' competitive record of 68, 4 under par, four years ago while winning a "big eight" competition, snagged 4 birdies while putting together a sub-71 card.

Referee Francis Ouimet, the former national open and amateur titilist, charged Burton with 79 strokes but Nelson credited him with a 77 because he marked a 6 and a 4 against his opponent on the 16th and 17th holes, where the latter picked up. Ouimet had given him a 7 and 5 on those greens.

Without holing a single long putt, Nelson won eight holes and lost only two to the Britisher.

Thanks to a lucky break, he jumped into the lead on the second hole, where his second shot, one of his few off the line, struck a feminine member of the 3500 gallery and dropped almost to the edge of the green instead of its true destination in some thick rough. Lord Byron capitalized that fortunate break for his first birdie.

Nelson 3-Up at Turn

Nelson was three-up making the turn with a one-under par 35 against a 38. Then he won the 10th and lost the 11th, where Burton regained some of the top form he displayed before starting his five years' service with an RAF ground crew.

But just when he appeared to be threatening Nelson's then three-hole lead, the luckless Britisher had another series of sour breaks, a lost ball on the 17th and a trapped and deeply buried drive on the short 17th.

Burton, however, did not appear to be dismayed about the start of his second American golfing visit—he came over with the British Ryder Cupsters back in 1935.

"It's going to take much stiff competition for me to regain my prewar form," he explained. "My game no wis only about 80 per cent of what it was before going into the service."

Record Crowds, Times Seen Today at Race

By Charles Dunkley

Indianapolis, Ind., May 29 (AP).—America's automobile race fans, hungry for exciting crack-ups, thrills and speed after a four-year famine, may establish a record attendance for tomorrow's thirtieth renewal of the world famous 500-mile classic at the Indianapolis Speedway with a crowd ranging upwards of 140,000.

The starting field of 33 drivers, one a European, speediest in the history of the event, is complete.

Only clear weather is needed to assure perfect racing conditions and a dry, fast track. However, the weatherman threatened to dampen the situation as possible showers, with cooler temperatures, were forecast. In the event of rain, the start, scheduled for 10 a. m. (EST) will be delayed until the weather clears. If showers come during the race, the drivers' speed will be slowed down to 45 miles an hour pending cessation of the rain.

City Bulging With Visitors

This Indiana capital city, already overcrowded for a week, was bulging tonight with the crush of race visitors. They dropped out of the air, arrived by trains and crowded the highways from all directions. They overflowed the sidewalks, overburdened downtown traffic and vainly sought a place to sleep. Hotels were jammed with three and four occupants to a room. Thousands of visitors spent the night with relatives or friends, while hundreds tried to sleep in parked cars, railroad station benches or hotel lobbies. Race fans are a breed of sleepless wonders, many remaining u pall night probably will not knock off a single wink.

Hundredrs were lined up in front of the sprawling 430-acre racing plant, 6 miles northwest of downtown Indianapolis, awaiting the opening of the gates at 6 a. m. They spent the night there wrapped in blankets or in front of fires to temper the night's chill.

Everywhere tonight the conversation was race chatter concerned with the possible winner, his time and the likelihood for shattering records. The talk centered around a quartet of famous drivers—Cliff Bergere, Indianapolis; Rex, Mays, Long Beach, Calif.; Ralph Hepburn, Vann Nuys, Calif., and Mauri Rose, South Bend, Ind., all veterans of speedway competition.

Hepburn Favored

The outstanding favorite, naturally, probably will be the 50-year-old Hepburn, who traveled faster than any other driver in zipping his low-slung, eight-cylinder racer around the 2½-mile track to a new qualifying record of 133.944 miles per hour. Bergere, at the age of 49, a veteran of 15 races, will start from the coveted pole position by reason of his achievement of streaking to a qualifying speed of 126.471 on the opening day of time trials 11 days ago. Mays, not so old but just as trackwise, hung up the second best qualifying time of 128.861.

Rose, cowinner of the last speedway race in 1941, finished ahead of the challenging Hepburn at that time. Hepburn's backers figure he can cruise at 115 miles an hour for more than half of the race and then gun his newly developed creation on to decisive triumph. Others predict he can make his bid early with terrific speed and take command before the race is 10 laps old.

The prize money from all sources will total about $102,500, the Speedway puts up $62,500, of which $20,000 goes to the winner. Prizes put up by accessory firms amount to about $20,000. Thus tomorrow's winner may likely pull down $30,-000.

Cards Extend Streak Over Chicubs, 5-2

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Pitcher Harry Brecheen and Terry Moore, veteran center fielder, were just about the entire show as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs, 5-2, here today. Besides winning the series, two games to one, St. Louis moved up to a 5-3 lead in the season competition against the defending National League champions.

Brecheen pitched 10 hit ball to gain his second victory over the Cubs and his third of the season. He also doubled off Cub starter Russ Mears for St. Louis' 2-0 lead in the second.

After that Brecheen turned the hitting chores over to Moore, whose single followed Red Schoendienst's triple in the fifth off Emil Kush, Mears' su cessor. The Cardinals' captain also singled for two more runs in the eighth while Hiram Bithorn, third Chicago pitcher of the game, was operating.

Lou Strinker's second of three hits accounted for the first Cub run in the fifth, and Peanuts Lowrey doubled for another in the seventh. After that only one other Cub reached base against Brecheen. Bob Scheffing, a pinch hitter, doubled with one out in the Cub ninth.

Ferriss Wins 8th for Bosox, 2-0, Over A's

Boston, May 29 (AP).—Dave (Doc) Ferriss won his eighth victory without defeat today as the Red Sox shut out the Philadlephia Athletics, 2-0, in a pitchers' battle.

Phil Marchildon gave the Sox but five hits and one of the runs scored against him was unearned. Ferriss was touched for only six, all singles, by the Mackmen.

Boston's first run was scored in the sixth. Johnny Pesky was safe when Feorge McQuinn dropped Jack Wallaesa's throw. Ted Williams' double to right moved Pesky to third.

Bobby Doerr strolled to load the bases and after Rudy York popped out to right field, Pesky scored on Dom DiMaggio's infield single, a slow bounder to Third Baseman Pete Suder.

The other Boston run also was scored by Pesky in the eighth. Johnny walked and came across on an infield out and York's single to left field.

Sho'men Name Athletic Head

Chestertown, Md., May 29 (AP).—Washington College officials announced today that Capt. George Ekaitis, football and track coach soon to be released from the Army, had been named graduate manager of athletics to succeed Fred L. Dumschott.

Athletic Director Tom Kibler said meanwhile that the college planned to arrange an intercollegiate soccer scheduled for next fall to give more college men a chance to participate in athletics.

Kibler said that most Eastern Shore High Schools—from which the majority of Washington's students are drawn—play soccer rather than football.

Ekaitis will continue to coach as well as handle his managerial duties, and Dumschott will devote his time exclusively to his post as business manager of the college.

Only 6,800 See Vernon Hit Twice

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, May 29.—Forty-one-year-old Red Ruffing clamped a three-hit strangle on Washington's four-game winning streak today and delivered a 4-0 victory in behalf of the Yankee. It was a breeze for the portly old fellow with only five Nats reaching base.

For the Nats, their only consolation was that the smallest crowd of the season in Yankee Stadium, 6807 fans, saw their utter futility against Ruffing.

The losing pitcher was Mickey Haefner, who can now count eight straight games in which he has been licked by the Yankees. Haefner's performance wasn't horribly incompetent, just inadequate. He allowed eight hits before he was removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Vernon Gets Pair

Until the ninth inning, Ruffing was pitching two-hit ball and only the bat of league batting leader Mickey Vernon had been thrust between the Yankee right-hander and a no-hit game. Vernon made both of the Nats' two hits during that span—a pair of singles to left field.

Eventually, Buddy Lewis got the third hit, a looping double to left that opened the ninth inning and threatened for a while to spoil Ruffing's shutout, but the last seen of Lewis as the game ended, he was still on second base.

Haefner's lack of control set up both of the Yankees' runs in the first and second innings. He walked Henrich with one out in the first, pitched a double to Keller and then purposely passed DiMaggio. Gordon's single to left scored Henrich, and the Yanks got no more because Nick Etten lined into Vernon's mitt for a soft-touch double play.

Walks Spells Run

It was a pass to Ruffing in the second inning, after Sylvestri singled with one out, that set up the Yankees' second run. With two out Henrich moved Sylvestri home with a single to right.

Two double plays helped Haefner out of trouble after he walked men in the third and fifth, but the Yanks packed

Toonerville Takes Charles Town Inaugural

$8 Shot Tops Army Belle By 1 Length

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, May 29.—Toonerville, Washington-owned sprinter, went to the front and made every post a winning one in the Inaugural Purse, opening-day feature of the Charles Town Jockey Club year, the son of Granville and Fly-Making his first appearance of the ing Winds led the favorite, I. K. Wynkoop's Army Belle into the wire by a length margin. Two lengths farther back came John Foster's Grey Prince to be third. Only five started in the test of seven furlongs.

Toonerville, handled by M. M. Greene, was second choice in the betting and paid an $8 mutuel. Winner of nine and 16 starts last season, the 7-year-old was clocked in 1:30 2/5 while under good handling by Jockey Web Snyder. The track was heavy and drying out and a crowd of 6000 turned out for the first of 46 days of the sport.

Snyder sent Toonerville to the front at the break and took him in on the rail, considered the worst part of the oval. Army Belle, was soon closest to the leader. Jockey Stanley Austin, on the latter, made repeated attempts to get to the leader. The mare rallied in the stretch but Snyder was whipping at the time and Army Belle appeared to shy a few yards from the finish.

Norman Corbin's Carlotta won the fifth event, a purse race and the secondary feature. The Head Play filly got home a half length in advance of Mrs. H. J. Mohr's Hay-Jay with G. S. Gentsler's Inez M., third. This winned paid $3.40. The daily double paid $85. H. M. Johnson's Charmful won the first and B. Boerner's Way Gold took the second.

Between races . . . Jockey Mike Sarno, who rode the winner of the second race, was aboard his first horse after four years in the Army . . . Danny Scocca will start riding here Friday . . . George Miller is out of the service and will attempt a saddle comeback here . . . Jack Richards, one time rider for the Denemark Stable, is another boy who is out of a uniform and ready to perform . . . Mrs. R. G. Simms purchased Intermission from H. R. Dulaney, jr. of Washington.

Abrams to Fight Lawer in Benefit

Richmond, Va., May 29 (AP).—Richmond police officials today announced the signing of Johnny Lawer, rugged Cleveland middleweight, to box Georgie Abrams in one of the two 10-round bouts which will feature the eleventh annual police benefit boxing show at Mooers Field here on Thursday, June 13.

Jack Cranford, Washington heavyweight, will appear in the other 10-rounder against an opponent still to be named.

On Eve of Getting Engaged, Girl Anticipates Happy Life With Man of Her Choice; However, He Uses Bad Grammar; Can She Correct This?

a friend to whom I expect to become engaged very shortly. He has a good position and some excellent personal qualities and it is my belief we should have a very happy married life.

However, there is just one thing that grates on my nerves, and makes me wonder what would be the net result in later years. He consistently misuses one verb. For example, he will say: "My father seen me writing a letter." This is not just an occasional slip of the tongue. All his conversation is salted by it.

Actually there is no excuse for it, as he is fairly well educated and attended a good college. You may say that considering his other good qualities, this is a very minor flaw. Perhaps it is, but I still maintain that it is a fly in the ointment from my viewpoint. Can you suggest a way to correct it? W. C.

Choice of Words Is Significant

DEAR W. C.: The fact that your young man persists in this verbal crudity, despite a college education and certainly some association with correctly spoken persons (yourself, for instance), suggests that he is pretty stubbornly resistant to cultural improvement,—whether on the speech front or any other.

Sensitivity to grammatical rules comes naturally to the studious or beauty-loving temperament; and the person who reads to satisfy intellectual curiosity may achieve fine use of vocabulary without any drilling in polite diction from parents or teachers in early years.

This being so, I am of the opinion that your beau's abuse of rhetoric is hardly to be attributed to environmental influences, past or present, even supposing his parents are poorly educated. I think it rather proclaims a certain innate stolidity, a clod-like nature, that has neither eye nor ear for pleasing nuances of thought, communication and behavior.

Thus, I am not at all sure that his "I seen" is to be dismissed as a minor scratch on congeniality. He may be an honest fellow, upstanding citizen and all that;—but if this crudity sticks in your craw and he doesn't know it, and you can't tell him, then you certainly don't speak each other's language in the deeper sense either.

Try Coaching, Like a Mother

HERE is the way I figure it: He is a bit of a dullard, rough and ready; whereas you are rather too dainty. He doesn't know this "I seen" offends you; and you feel just too much of a lady to beard him about it. But if you have any notion of marrying the man, you certainly ought to make this a test case of whether constructive criticism can be employed with profit to the relationship. I think you'd be foolish to marry him if you can't speak to him frankly about things that matter.

Now for advice: Hereafter and continuing for a month (unless he reforms before then), jack him up, in merry manner, every time he says, "I seen." Not, however, in the presence of others; only when you are alone together. On such occasions, when he says "I seen," cut in promptly with "I saw"—as mothers do when coaching children. And apply this corrective every time he misuses the verb. He may get vexed and he may fight back; or he may be a good sport and learn fast. Either way, you'll learn a lot about his temperament—that you ought to know, before getting engaged to him. M. H.

Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall Back To Visit Old Capital Friends

By Marie McNair

HERE for her first visit in a number of years, Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, widow of Vice President Marshall, is stopping with her old friend, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty.

For eight years during the Wilson administration Mrs. Marshall was one of the most feted women in this town, for one of the functions of the Vice President and his wife to serve as sort of good will emissaries for the President and First Lady.

Since the death of her husband more than a score of years ago Mrs. Marshall has lived quietly in Phoenix, Ariz., but has maintained a voting residence in Indianapolis, her early home.

In Mrs. Marshall's house at Phoenix are pleasant reminders of her days in Washington. There are photographs of the late King of Belgium and Queen Elizabeth, who visited this country after World War 1. There is another of Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge taken together.

Her visits to Indianapolis are infrequent, but Mrs. Marshall comes East almost every summer to see her physician in Boston and when she does she never fails to stop off at Westport, Conn., to stay with Mrs. Dougherty at her summer home.

But "Little Cedars" was sold last year and Mrs. Dougherty hasn't yet been able to find a small house more suitable to her needs. So Mrs. Marshall planned her itinerary to take in Washington before going North on a series of visits to keep her away from home until fall.

SUNDAY night suppers at the United Nations Club should become increasingly popular now that Kurt Hetzel will b e there to play.

A gifted pianist, Dr. Hezel always has been more than gererous with his talent with his friends. He loves to play as much as they love to hear him, and oftentimes he'll keep them entertained hours at a time, running the gamut from the heaviest classic to popular music of the day.

During the war Kurt Hezel has had a job in the map service of Army Engineers, War Department; in fact, is still working at it and finds it an extremely interesting occupation.

Pretty Mrs. Hetzel—Lanette to her friends—who can do just about anything to which she turns her hand, is about to embark in real estate, joining Mrs. Emery Smith's organization. Mrs. Hetzel has managed an exclusive dress shop, dabbled in interior decoration.

"I don't know whether I can sell houses or not, but I'm going to try," she says.

Town Topics:

IT WILL be news with a capital N if and when Margaret Truman makes her singing debut on the radio. At the benefit garden party last Saturday sponsored by the Women's National Democratic Club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies, Mrs. Truman and her daughter went up to congratulate Jean Tennyson of "Great Moments of Music" fame.

"I understand you have a beautiful voice," Miss Tennyson said to the President's daughter. Margaret Truman admitted she was studying for opera and hoped to have a musical career. It was then that Miss Tennyson made the suggestion that she sing as guest artist on her radio program.

"I am interested," was Miss Truman's reply, and she added that she wasn't quite ready. "Ma'se me an offer in six months." If Miss Truman goes through with it she'll be paid the regular fee to new singers, which is $150.

THAT bandaged thumb Mrs. Dean Acheson was nursing was the result of scraping some hundreds of carrots for the conservation luncheon—last in the series—given by Prof. Ramon Ramos and his Spanish classes, with Mrs. Truman as guest of honor. Mrs. Lester Pearson, wife of the Canadian Ambassador, turned over the embassy for the fete and as the members said "hasta la vista" until the fall, they also voted it their best party of the season.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Bus, Trolley and Motorcycle Injure Women Pedestrians

Three women pedestrians were injured in traffic accidents in the District yesterday.

Mrs. Ardis D. Darrow, 46, of 611 Tuckerman st. nw. was struck by a bus about 8 p. m. last night at 14th and K sts, nw. Mrs. Darrow was crossing 14th street when a bus westbound on K street with high school students from Birdsboro, Pa. struck her as it turned right into 14th street. The charter bus was operated by Elmer Ulrick, 38, of Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Darrow, the wife of Howard B. Darrow, was admitted to Emergency Hospital with an injured right leg.

Mrs. Pearl Peters, 55, of Memphis, Tenn., was injured at 14th and E sts. nw. when a streetcar, turning north into 14th st. struck her. The streetcar was operated by Ernest L. Adams, 43, of 4127 8th st. nw., according to police. Mrs. Peters was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a concussion.

Mrs. Sadie Katzman, 66, of 4514 Connecticut ave., was injured in front of her home when struck by a motorcycle operated by Clark B. Fund Campaign Reaches $50,000

The Greater National Capital Committee's 1946 campaign yesterday reached $50,000, a little more than 70 per cent of the $70,000 goal.

Eight divisions of the campaign have already reached or exceeded their quota, members reported at a luncheon meeting in the Statler Hotel. The total quota is expected to be met within two weeks, members predicted.

Divisions already at the top include Automotive, headed by Maj. Henry Cunningham, branch manager, Ford Motor Co., 115 per cent; Bankers, F. B. H. Siddons, American Security & Trust Co., 108 per cent; Breweries, T. H. Wilson, Heurich Brewing Co., 185 per cent; Building & Loan League, E. C. Baltz, Perpetual Building & Loan Association, 100 per cent; Chain Drug Stores, Paul Largent, Peoples Drug Stores, 100 per cent; Laundries, Jay Conger, Conger and Yale Laundry, 125 per cent; Newspapers, William Shelton, Times-Herald, 117 per cent; Utilities, A. G. Neal, Pepco, 100 per cent.

Portraits

By James J. Metcalfe

We honor them

Today we lay aside our work
...To honor those who fell...
Who heard the call to duty and
...Who served our country well
...They are the heroes great and true...Who sleep beneath the sod...And who have earned their heritage...Of happiness with God...We owe eternal gratitude...To each and every son...Whose bravery made possible...The victory we won...
They gave up all they had to give...That we might live in peace...And so that liberty might have...An everlasting lease...They are the men who did their best...Against the odds they met...And whose supreme unselfishness...We never will forget.

...And So They Were Married

Pincock—Robinson

The Congressional Club was the setting for a candlelight wedding last night when Miss Karma Jane Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Junius Robinson, became the bride of Lowell Dalling Pincock, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Sanford Pincock, Rexburg, Idaho. The ceremony was performed by President Ernest Wilkenson of the Washington Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin princess gown with train and sweetheart neckline outlined in seed pearls. Her full-length veil of Point Venise lace fell from a coronet of lilies of the valley. She carried white roses.

Miss Mary-Jane Abendschein, wearing an off-the-shoulder gown of yellow net, acted as maid of honor. The Misses Virginia Anne Koenig and Mary Jean Lupton, bridesmaids, wore pale blue with lace bodices and full net skirts. Dee Whitford Pincock served his brother as best man. Ushers were Henry Wray and Wells Brockbank.

The bride, granddaughter of Representative J. Will Robinson of Utah, atended George Washington University and is a member of Chi Omega. Mr. Pincock studied at the University of Idaho and now is attending Georgetown Dental School. He is a member of Delta Sigma Delta, dental fraternity.

After a trip to Virginia Beach, the couple will reside at 1020 19th st. nw.

Lebling—Walsh

White gladioli decorated the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament yesterday for the wedding of Miss Rita T. Walsh, daughter of Mrs. Edward Walsh, Chevy Chase, and Robert William Lebling, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Lebling, Bethesda.

Gowned in white satin with a veil of French illusion, the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Richard T. Walsh. Mrs. James J. Saxon served as matron of honor and maid of honor was Miss Betsy Holland. The Misses Nancy Keane, Mary Lebling and Marie Oliver and Mrs. James O. Gray were bridesmaids.

William L. Lebling acted as best man for his son. Ushers were Pfc. Peter Lebling, USMCR, Edward K. Walsh, John Shumate, Hobart Montee, and William Hepner. A reception followed at the home of the bride's aunt and uncle, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William C. Rose.

The bride is a graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent. Mr. Lebling, graduate of Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, attended Holy Cross College for two years. He served overseas with the Air Corps for 13 months and now is completing his studies at George Washington University. He also is associated with his father's real estate business.

After a Seal Island, Ga., honeymoon, the couple will be at home in Chevy Chase.

Rockafeller—Jacobson

The Fort Myer Chapel was the scene May 25 of the wedding of Miss Valaree Margaret Jacobson and Lieut. (j. g.) Eugene Francis Rockefeller, jr., USNR. The bride is the daughter of Commodore and Mrs. Jacob Harry Jacobson of Washington. Lieutenant Rockafeller is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Francis Rockafeller, Belmar, N. J. Chaplain A. S. Rosso, USN, officiated.

The bride, wearing white satin with a lace bertha and a Juliet cap holding her long veil of illusion, carried gardenias, bouvardia and stephanotis. Her father gave her in marriage. Miss Suzanne McHugh served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were the Misses Joan Brannon, Frances Engler, Betsy Garrison and Barbara Wise. Best man was Ensign G. B. Donahoe, USN. A reception followed at the bride's home.

The bride is a graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent and Romona Convent in Alhambra, Calif. Lieutenant Rockafeller was graduated from Admiral Farragut Academy and Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, Long Island.

Following a wedding trip the couple will live in Boston, Mass., where the bridegroom is stationed.

May Bride

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. James H. Overby was Miss Catherine Tullis, daughter of Mrs. Helen M. Tullis, Washington, before her marriage yesterday in Western Presbyterian Church to the son of Mrs. E. J. Overby, Fremont, N. C. The couple will live in the Capital

Miss Wood Away

Miss Ellen Wood has gone to Freehold, N. J., to open a drive to purchase the home of Philip Freneau, poet of the American Revolution, as an American Shrine. She will return to Washington in about a week.

Ask Anne

Your Questions On Homemaking

How can I send a cake through the mail without danger of its breaking?—R. S.

One of the most successful methods is to wrap the cake in waxed paper and place it in a box surrounded with popped corn. The corn will keep the cake from jarring against the sides of the box.

How can I clean soiled parchment or paper lamp shades?—H.A.

Wallpaper cleaner will make parchment and paper shades look like new.

I've been told that a little cream of tartar added to the cooking water will help keep rice white. Is this true?—B. N.

Yes. In some parts of the country minerals in the water cause the rice to develop a grayish color. Adding a little cream of tartar will keep it snowy white.

What is the difference between fish fillets and fish steaks?—A. E.

Fillets are the solid, all-meat sides of the entire fish cut lengthwise away from the backbone and with all other bones removed. Steaks are slices cut through the entire body of the fish at right angles to its length.

How can I keep cream filling from soaking into a layer cake?—O. B.

Let the cake cool and just before covering with filling sprinkle a small quantity of confectioners' sugar over the cake.

My energetic baby has come close to tipping over his high chair at times. Can you suggest an anchor?—F. O. C.

Fasten on the wall a staple similar to one used on screen door fasteners. Then put the hook part of the fastener on the back of the baby's high chair. When the baby is in the chair pull it up to the staple and hook it.

Forrestal Reception Starts Parties

Many Greet Brazil's Marine Minister

FIRST event in a round of festivities honoring the visiting Minister of Marine of Brazil, Vice Admiral Jorge Dodsworth Martins, and Mme. Dodsworth was the reception given yesterday by the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. James V. Forrestal.

The party, held in the East Room of the Mayflower, was a distinctly Pan American and Navy affair. Gold braid flashed on the uniforms of many countries as high-ranking officers came to pay their respects to the visitor, whose position corresponds to that of our Secretary of the Navy.

In the absence of Mrs. Forrestal, who is in New York, Mrs. John L. Sullivan, wife of the assistant secretary of Navy for air, acted as hostess. In the receiving line, too, was Ambassador Carlos Martins. Secretary Forrestal's aide, Capt. W. R. Smedberg, introduced the guests, who included a large portion of the Capital's Brazilian community.

Like Their Visit

Admiral Dodsworth and his attractive blonde wife are enthusiastic over their first visit to the United States. They arrived in Washington about a month ago but started out immediately on a country-wide tour which brought them back to National Airport at noon yesterday. Their party includes Mrs. Dodsworth's son, Dr. Paulo Bojunga de Silva, and his wife and the admiral's aide, Lieut. Costa Couto de Freitas, and Mme. Couto de Freitas.

To make up for their previous short stay in Washington, the Dodsworths will spend this afternoon in a motor tour of the Capital an dtonight will be honor guests at a dinner at the Brazilian Embassy.

Tomorrow Admiral Dodsworth will visit the Naval Academy at Annapolis — Mme. Dodsworth may accompany him—and will lunch with the superintendent, Vice Admiral Aubrey Fitch: In the afternoon he will view a dress parade of midshipmen and that night will be entertained at a dinner given by naval officers at the Statler.

Saturday's schedules includes a visit to the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, luncheon with Admiral Jonas H. Ingram aboard the Capitanea and at 6 p. m., a reception to be given by the Brazilian Naval Attache and Mme. de Medeiros in the Congress Room of the Statler.

Will Visit White House

Sunday Admiral Dodsworth will place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

President Truman will receive Admiral Dodsworth at the White House Monday. At noon the minitser will visit the Naval Gun Factory, where he will be entertained at luncheon by the superintendent. Climax of the day will be a dinner to be given at the Mayflower by Fleet Admiral and Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz.

A number of informal activities also are being planned for the visitors, who will leave for Rio de Janeiro June 11.

Admiral Dodsworth, who is part English, formerly served as Naval Attache in London and Paris.

West Point Cadet Fields to Marry Virginian June 11

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Nancy Loraine Stovall, Danville, Va., to West Point Cadet Jesse Albert Fields, jr., son of Mrs. Nina Harris Fields, this city.

The bride-elect was graduated from Stratford College in Danville and the Richmond division of the College of William and Mary. Cadet Fields is a member of the June graduating class at United States Military Academy and attended George Washington University and Columbian Preparatory School. The wedding will take place June 11 at Shelton Memorial Presbyterian Church, Danville.

Bank Closings On Saturdays Studied Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Members of the District Bankers Association discussed pros and cons of a proposal to close banks on Saturdays at a special meeting yesterday afternoon and referred the matter to a committee for further study.

Bruce Baird, president of the association, presided at the special parley and representatives of all local banks were present.

A spokesman said after the session in the association's headquarters at 730 15th st. nw., that it was too early yet to say whether a majority of bank officials here favor the Saturday shutdowns.

The bankers first must determine whether such a Saturday suspension is feasible and practical, he said. It was pointed out that while Government employes are on a five-day week, stores and many other private businesses still remain open on Saturdays.

The general feeling among bankers is that if the Merchant and Manufacturers Association and the Board of Trade definitely decide to make Saturdays a holiday, banks logically could take the same step without impairing service.

The issue was brought to the fore here by a bill introduced in Congress this week by Representative Green of Pennsylvania which would make Saturday a legal holiday for Washington banks.

Several months ago, the New York State and New Jersey legislatures approved Saturday bank closings.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

C. & P. Net Up Slightly

April net income of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. totaled $248,288 before interest and dividends, as compared with $245,286 in the same 1945 month.

A $160,000 increase in month's operating revenues was more than offset by a $328,000 jump in expenses, but taxes were down about $168,000.

For the first four months, C. & P. net income was $974,255 against $1,013,167 in the corresponding 1945 period.

Telephones in service at the end of April numbered 369,223, as compared with 367,609 at the same time last year. Customers made 192,299,000 calls in the first four months, against 166,824,000 in the same 1945 period.

N. & W. Elevates Trio

Elevation of three veteran officers was announced yesterday by the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co. following a meeting of the board of directors.

J. Allen Riordan, general manager for the past seven years, was elected vice president. G. E. Herring, former chief clerk and purchasing agent, was named general manager. H. I. Moler was promoted from assistant purchasing agent to purchasing agent.

Mr. Riordan, native of Washington and graduate of Georgetown University School of Law, has been with the shipping firm for 45 years. He was general claim agent from 1907 to 1913, auditor from 1913 to 1929 and general manager from 1929.

Mr. Herring has been with the N. & W. line for 35 years. He is chairman of the board of trustees of Columbus University and a past State deputy of the Knights of Columbus here.

Mr. Moler has been with the company for 15 years.

$3,230,000 Claims Paid Here

Death claims totaling 3615 for $3,230,000 were paid in Washington during the first three months of this year, according to the Institute of Life Insurance. The policies were divided as follows: 692 ordinary for $2,133,000, 693 group for $617,000, and 2230 industrial for $480,000.

Earnings Statements

Celotex Corp. and wholly-owned subsidiaries reported for 6 months ended April 30 net profit of $1,249,123, equal to $1.48 a common share, compared with $305,895, or 30 cents a share, in the comparable period a year earlier. Net sales increased to $13,676,398 from $10,431,163.

Lee Rubber & Tire Corp. reported for six months to April 30 net profit of $1,146,105, equal to $4.74 a share, against $776,028, or $3.21 a share, in the like period of 1945.
